Streetcars may be here to stay

City has committed to paying two-thirds of contract with Bombardier for 204 new streetcars ◐ Province to pay the rest ◐ Ford says he'll talk to premier on transit plan

Mayor-elect Rob Ford is backing further away from campaign musings about "phasing out" streetcars, saying yesterday that if cancelling a $1.25-billion order for a replacement fleet "is going to cost the taxpayers an arm and a leg, then obviously we can't do it."

Ford, who takes office Dec. 1, made the comment yesterday on John Oakley's radio show after saying on another show Torontonians who didn't vote for him can call him to talk about their concerns.

"I'd like to slowly phase out streetcars and replace them with buses."
ROB FORD
TO THE TORONTO SUN SEPT. 8

His deputy campaign manager, Nick Kouvalis, suggested replacing streetcars with buses could take a decade.

But Tuesday, Ford's brother Doug, his campaign manager and replacement as councillor in Ward 2, told the Toronto Star they have no plans to "start yanking up streetcars and throwing them in the lake."

Graham James surrenders

Convicted sex offender Graham James surrendered to police at Pearson International Airport yesterday and was whisked to Winnipeg, where he has been wanted on nine charges of sexual assault.

Police in the Manitoba capital issued a short news release saying they had been conducting an investigation into complaints of "historic sexual assaults" against the former junior hockey coach. They added James was arrested "through mutual agreement" and "remains in custody."

No additional details will be released, they said.

The warrant, issued earlier this month, listed allegations from three new complainants. They including former NHL star Theoren Fleury, who has published a tell-all autobiograpy alleging that James abused him. The other two complainants can't be named because of a publication ban.

James pleaded guilty in 1997 to hundreds of assaults on two teenage players, including former NHLer Sheldon Kennedy, and was sentenced to three and a half years in prison. He was quietly pardoned three years ago, news that caused an uproar when it was revealed earlier this year.

James' last known address was in Guadalajara, Mexico.

Magician thinking inside Plexiglas box

Toronto escape artist attempts vanishing trick to feed the hungry — just in time for Halloween

A Canadian escape artist and magician who has pulled off several death-defying feats hopes the public will help make him disappear by Halloween.

Scott Hammell entered a Plexiglas box — a bit larger than a bus shelter — outside Union Station yesterday morning.

The illusionist is challenging the public to pile up cans of donated food around the box and help him pull off his vanishing act by Halloween — the same night legendary magician Harry Houdini died in 1926.

"I'm not afraid of no ghosts," quipped Hammell, camped out with a rug and a chair in his box.

A grocery chain donated the first 2,000 cans of food that were stacked high around two sides of the box.

The 25-year-old Toronto resident will live on a liquid diet for the stunt, which is part of Free the Children's Halloween for Hunger campaign.

"Warm clothes, thermal underwear. I've got lots of warm blankets and jackets so I'll be staying warm that way."
SCOTT HAMMELL, MAGICIAN

Hammell holds three Guinness World Records. In 2003, he set the record for the world's highest suspension straitjacket escape. In 2008, he set the record for the longest inverted juggling duration in his parents' basement in Waterloo. In 2009, he pulled off the fastest-moving card trick in Perris Valley, Calif.

He has applied for certification from Guinness officials for a daredevil skydiving jump he made in May. He leapt blindfolded and handcuffed out of a plane at 3,350 metres over Hamilton.

CRITIC OF MUSLIM 'INBREEDNG' INFORMED EXPERT'S OPINION OF KHADR, COURT HEARS

A Danish psychologist who believes Muslims are raised to be aggressive and that inbreeding has damaged their genes informed a damning expert opinion of the risk Omar Khadr poses to public safety, court heard yesterday.

Under cross-examination by defence lawyers, Dr. Michael Welner said he talked to Nicolai Sennels before coming to the conclusion that the Toronto-born Khadr was "highly dangerous" — an opinion he gave Tuesday on the first day of Khadr's sentencing hearing.

Welner, a witness for the prosecution, said he admired Sennels for his work trying to help young Muslim inmates in Denmark and found him informative.

Sennels, who is based in Copenhagen, has written extensively on Muslims, including one article introduced into evidence Tuesday.

"If a Muslim does not react aggressively when criticized he is seen as weak, not worth trusting and he thus loses social status immediately," Sennels wrote.

In another article, Sennels attributed a host of problems within the Islamic world to intermarriage among first cousins.

"Massive inbreeding within the Muslim culture during the last 1,400 years may have done catastrophic damage to their gene pool."

Sennels has also stated that Muslim integration into western societies is not possible, a view Welner called "political."

The military officers on the jury will decide on a sentence for Khadr, who pleaded guilty on Monday to five war-crimes charges. While they can sentence him to life in prison, the actual sentence will be capped at eight years under a plea-bargain agreement. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Move on from bigot tweet: McGuinty

- Premier insists Liberals were not suggesting Tories were homophobic
- It's up to McGuinty to make sure minister issues clear, unequivocal apology if he wants tainted tweet issue to go away, says Hudak

A controversial tweet by a rookie Ontario cabinet minister accusing several Conservative politicians — including Prime Minister Stephen Harper — of being bigots had Premier Dalton McGuinty on the defensive for a second day yesterday.

Innovation Minister Glen Murray was forced to issue an apology Tuesday for tweeting that Harper, Ontario Opposition Leader Tim Hudak and Toronto mayor-elect Rob Ford were bigots, but Hudak complained it wasn't a sincere mea culpa.

"It's an outrageous accusation and the minister should do the right thing and publicly state he is sorry for his remarks," Hudak said yesterday.

"The right thing to do is clearly and unconditionally apologize, but unfortunately all we get is apologies with buts and more allegations."

Murray said in a written apology that he regretted sending the tweet, but had been very upset by homophobic ads and anti-gay tactics that surfaced in the final days of the Toronto mayoral campaign.

In the apology, Murray also challenged Hudak to "root out any of those working in his ranks who would try to exploit hatred with smear tactics," which again upset the Opposition leader.

"For a minister of the Crown to suggest that the Ontario PC Party, anybody on my team, my colleagues, had anything to do with this is reprehensible," said Hudak. "It is insulting. It is way across the line."

TANYA TALAGA/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

"Politics can be rough and tumble. Sometimes you can get carried away and cross the line and you can say something that in hindsight you regret. I think this is clearly one of those cases."
PREMIER DALTON MCGUINTY

McGuinty said yesterday that Hudak should simply accept Murray's apology and "move on" to more important issues.

"I think we're going a little bit too far when we begin to parse an apology, and now we're trying to define the quality of the apology," McGuinty told reporters.

Murray repeated his apology in the legislature yesterday, but with hands shaking and voice cracking, he again focused on the homophobic tactics that surfaced in the Toronto mayoral campaign.

"My poor choice of words has distracted us from a substantive issue," he said.

"The real issue for me is the use of homophobic smears in the final days of this week's municipal campaign."

Outside the legislature, Murray insisted he had wasn't blaming anyone for the anti-gay actions in the mayoral race, even though he named Harper, Hudak and Ford in his tweet.

Murray also finally said he was sorry for suggesting in his apology that Hudak was harbouring anti-gay members in the Tory caucus.

Branson, MP take aim at homelessness

Virgin Mobile survey of 1,000 Canadians showed 87 per cent didn't grasp scope of homelessness in country

Sharply dressed and well-spoken, Amber Parsons embodies all the qualities of a confident, assured young woman looking forward to her future. She is also among the countless youth in Canada without a permanent home.

Born in Toronto, she moved with her mother to the U.S. at age two. Parsons said her mother was an addict who spent all her money on drugs and alcohol, leaving the young girl to fend for herself, stealing food from stores as young as age three.

Growing up in foster care since age six, Parsons started smoking cigarettes and marijuana at age 10 before turning to drugs and alcohol in her early teens, even resorting to selling her body to feed her drug and alcohol habit.

65,000

There are an estimated 65,000 homeless youth in Canada.

"It's important for girls and guys so they know that people have been through what they've been through and that if I can do something to change it and I can work on it, they can too," she said.

Parsons shared her story at an event held at a youth shelter in Toronto yesterday, where Virgin founder Sir Richard Branson and Liberal MP Carolyn Bennett lent their voices in a call to action to address the issue of youth homelessness.

Branson and Bennett donned aprons and served breakfast at Eva's Phoenix, a transitional housing and training facility for youth. The British entrepreneur and Toronto MP voiced support for the establishment of a National Youth Homelessness Awareness Day on Nov. 17.

Virgin Mobile has launched the website 504nyhad.com to host a petition to collect signatures in support of Motion 504 put forward by Bennett in Parliament.

In an interview, Branson recalled driving into Toronto from the airport at around 2 a.m. a few years back and seeing about seven teens huddled together over a grate as snow lay on the ground.

"I just thought in a country like Canada this shouldn't exist. Something's wrong here."

Feds rejected agency's OK for Kairos funding

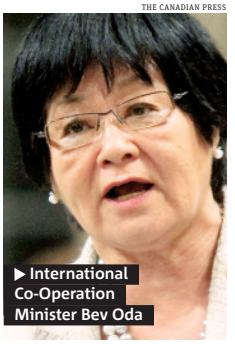
The Harper government ignored advice from its own civil servants when it ended funding to a church-based aid group last year, documents show.

Kairos, representing 11 churches and religious groups, had received Canadian International Development Agency funding for its overseas projects for 35 years. In November last year, an agency official told the Toronto-based group its funding would not be renewed because its most recent proposal did not match CIDA priorities.

But a memo prepared two months earlier by CIDA for International Co-operation Minister Bev Oda shows public servants recommended giving the group more than $7 million over four years.

The amount included a four per cent increase in funding over previous years "to recognize Kairos' strategic alignment with CIDA's objectives," says the document.

THE CANADIAN PRESS



▶ International Co-Operation Minister Bev Oda

The memo, obtained through the Access to Information Act, includes endorsements from 20 CIDA specialists and Canadian officials posted abroad.

A representative from the Foreign Affairs Department in the Sudan said Kairos' proposed work could help ensure that country's oil wealth contributes to peace and equitable development.

"This work, actively supported, can be very useful," diplomat Louis Guay wrote.

Some officials requested changes and clarifications to the proposal, but none indicated they didn't support the projects.

The memo, approved by CIDA president Margaret Biggs, concludes with a recommendation "that you (the minister) sign below to indicate you approve a contribution of $7,098,758 over four years for the above program."

The document was signed by Oda on Nov. 27, 2009, three days before Kairos learned its proposal was declined. But the word "NOT," hand-written and in capital letters, was inserted so the statement reads in the negative.

Government sources say veterans' groups will receive a full tax refund for paying the HST on poppies for their annual Remembrance Day fundraising campaign.

Hotel workers hit picket line

Picket lines went up yesterday morning at the Delta Chelsea hotel in Toronto, but management says it's business as usual.

The union representing the hotel workers says talks broke down over workloads, job security, wages and benefits.

Unite Here Local 75 says the walkout was the beginning of a two-week strike at the 1,500-room downtown hotel. The hotel says the level of service to its guests has not been affected by the strike.

The workers reached a strike-lockout deadline last week.

Glass found in Durham playground

Durham regional police say it appears someone may have placed broken glass at the bottom of slides in a Pickering, Ont., playground.

Police say they were called last weekend by concerned parents after a broken beer bottle was found under a slide.

Police say a mother found the broken bottle sticking out of wood chips under one of the playground slides at David Farr Memorial Park.

The broken side pointed upwards and police say glass shards were found underneath two other slides. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Program allows Facebook hacking

- Firesheep is a downloadable plug-in for Mozilla FireFox web browser
- Test hackers easily accessed Facebook accounts on open WiFi networks

Think twice before logging into Facebook with free WiFi access — unless you don't mind snoopers reading and potentially altering your profile.

A software developer is hoping to educate users about the dangers of using unsecured WiFi networks with a computer program that makes it easy to hack into Facebook and Twitter accounts.

With a download of Firesheep, a plug-in for Mozilla's FireFox web browser, all it takes is patience and a couple clicks to access someone's profile on a variety of websites, also including the photo-sharing site Flickr and the Wordpress blogging platform.

The program sniffs out log ons over the network and connects Firesheep users with those accounts.

"Websites have a responsibility to protect the people who depend on their services. They've been ignoring this responsibility for too long, and it's time for everyone to demand a more secure web," wrote Seattle-based Eric Butler in a blog post explaining his program.

"On an open wireless network, cookies are basically shouted through the air, making these attacks extremely easy," Butler wrote. In just over 24 hours, Firesheep was downloaded more than 129,000 times.

"Just for a test with one of my colleagues I logged into his profile and I was able to change his status to single. And within about 10 minutes his girlfriend commented and said, 'Why??'"
IT PROFESSIONAL IAN ROBERTSON

Among the users was Ian Robertson, an IT professional in Ottawa who took his laptop to a couple of local coffee shops to give the program a test drive with a colleague.

"I was able to see about half a dozen accounts on Facebook and was able to actually log into their accounts, view all their photos, all their private information, their phone numbers — anything," said Robertson.

COMMONS COMMITTEE

G20 'a sad weekend for civil liberties'

The security response at the G20 summit in Toronto, where police arrested hundreds of protestors without pressing charges raises fundamental questions about the health of democracy in this country, said the Canadian Civil Liberties Association.

"It was a sad weekend for civil liberties in Canada. We can do better," Nathalie Des Rosiers, the general counsel for the national advocacy group, told the Commons public safety committee yesterday. The committee is investigating the security response to the summit last June, which saw rioting in downtown Toronto streets and mass arrests more than a thousand protesters, with all but a hundred of them never being charged.

"Space and mobility were redefined, weaponry was redefined, privacy was redefined," Des Rosiers told MPs, noting that while such redefinitions may have been necessary, they were done behind closed doors without any input from the public.

"It's not true that there was martial law declared during the G20 weekend in Toronto," Des Rosiers told MPs. "This is dangerous. Our system of government requires that all powers be exercised according to law."

Her testimony followed the firsthand accounts of two young women from Montreal, Jacinthe Poisson and Wissam , who were both taken into custody during a mass arrest at a University of Toronto residence on June 27, the final day of the summit.

"Conditions inside the detention centre were ... dehumanizing and humiliating," said Poisson.

Buttonville airport to close

Buttonville airport will close within the next five years, its owner said yesterday, after an agreement was reached to sell the land to developers in a joint real estate venture.

Derek Sifton, president of Toronto Airways Ltd., which owns the airport, announced that a deal had been reached between its parent company, Armadale Co. Ltd., and real estate giant Cadillac Fairview.

"We are working together to maximize the property for the future," Sifton said, adding that his company envisions a "mixed-use development" on the current airport lands that will "essentially create a new town."

"It could have office space, residential, condo, hotels, shops and restaurants," he said, adding it will be a high-density development built to Cadillac Fairview's green sustainability standards.

Sifton said his company hopes to relocate its airport on the Pickering airport lands sometime in the future. In addition to the airport itself, Toronto Airways Ltd. runs Million Air Toronto and the largest flight school in Canada.

Man charged in bomb plot

WASHINGTON. A Pakistani-born man was arrested yesterday and charged with trying to help people he believed were al-Qaida operatives in planning to bomb subway stations around the U.S. capital.

The FBI said the public was never in danger because its agents were aware of the man's activities and monitored him throughout.

Accused is Farooque Ahmed, 34, a naturalized U.S. citizen.

Woman's body never found

HALIFAX. A Halifax man has been charged with second-degree murder in the disappearance of a woman whose body has not been found.

Steven Elliot Laffin, 36, was due in court today, charged in the death of Nadine Taylor. The 29-year-old woman, who police say was a prostitute, was reported missing on July 31.

Laffin is already in jail in connection with an alleged attack against a woman in August. He was charged with kidnapping, aggravated sexual assault, uttering threats and forcible confinement. He is due back in court on those charges next month.

Police allege air ticket scam

OTTAWA. An Ottawa man has been charged over an alleged airline ticket sales fraud.

Police say fraudulent credit card numbers were used to purchase airline tickets for customers.

Paul Kasonga, 56, is charged with unauthorized use of a credit card, fraud over $5,000, laundering proceeds of crime and possession of proceeds of crime over $5,000.

Blowing whistle on a whistleblower

Federal watchdog reviewed many allegations of wrongdoing, but acted on none of them ◆ Complaints against Christine Ouimet being probed

Government accountability advocates are calling for an independent review of claims that were dismissed by the federal whistleblower watchdog.

They also say the law that's supposed to protect public servants if they report wrongdoing needs to be rebuilt.

Over the last three years, the public sector integrity commissioner reviewed 170 allegations of wrongdoing and 58 claims of reprisals, but substantiated none of them.

But Christine Ouimet now has suddenly retired and the auditor general is investigating complaints against her.

A coalition of more than 30 groups wants a new commissioner, but also says the existing law has too many loopholes.

The groups say it's time to review why the commissioner's office rejected so many claims.

They include the case of military veteran Sean Bruyea, who was offered an apology by the federal government this week for the way bureaucrats mishandled his medical files.

Allan Cutler, a longtime advocate of government accountability, said several other claims that were dismissed by the commissioner have been substantiated by volunteers.

Liberals blast Tories' military chopper buys

Liberals would cancel Conservatives' accord for F-35s: Ignatieff ◐ Huge cost overruns, delays: Auditor general

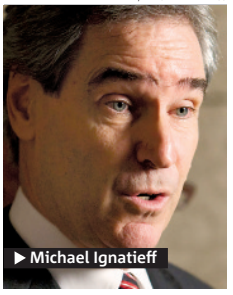
Michael Ignatieff says a Liberal government would cancel the multibillion-dollar, sole-source stealth fighter contract and hold an open competition to replace the country's aging CF-18s.

The Liberal leader says Tuesday's report by the auditor general about the contracting fiasco involving military helicopters is a wake-up call for parliamentarians.

"This is a story of waste, cost overruns, failure of ministerial responsibility and accountability. What was Peter MacKay doing in these years when these costs skyrocketed and no control was exerted over the process?" Ignatieff said yesterday after a meeting with his caucus.

ADRIAN WYLD/THE CANADIAN PRESS



▶ Michael Ignatieff

"We've decided ... that we would cancel the accord reached by the Conservative government on the F-35s. We would reform the acquisition to take into account what the auditor general is saying about the waste of money and bad management."

The Conservative government last summer committed to buying 65 F-35 Lightning II jetfighters from U.S. defence giant Lockheed Martin at an estimated cost of $14 billion to $16 billion.

Opposition parties and defence critics have been calling ever since for Ottawa to get bids from other defence contractors.

Romanian government survives vote amid protest

Romania's government survived a no-confidence vote in Parliament yesterday as 30,000 people protested in Bucharest against wage cuts and austerity measures taken by the authorities during a biting recession.

The opposition garnered 219 votes, 17 short short of the majority it would have needed to topple Prime Minister Emil Boc's government, parliament secretary Dumitru Pardau said.

International Monetary Fund officials were visiting Romania to review the country's ailing economy. Romania took a $27.8-billion US loan from the IMF, the European Union and the World Bank last year.

President rushes home from Vietnam to deal with catastrophes

The death toll from a tsunami and a volcano rose to more than 300 yesterday as more victims of Indonesia's double disasters were found and an official said a warning system installed after a deadly ocean wave in 2004 had broken from a lack of maintenance.

Hundreds were still missing after Monday's tsunami struck the remote Mentawi islands off western Sumatra, where officials were only beginning to chart the scope of the devastation. The huge wave, triggered by an undersea earthquake, washed away wooden and bamboo homes.

The first cargo plane loaded with tents, medicine, food and clothes landed yesterday in the tsunami-hit area, said disaster official Ade Edward.

Indonesia's early tsunami warning system, completed in 2008, has since fallen into such disrepair that it effectively stopped working about a month ago, according to the head of the Meteorology and Geophysic Agency.

In central Java, the Mount Merapi volcano was mostly quiet but still a threat after Tuesday's eruption that sent searing ash clouds into the air.

He's acquitted after 27 lost years in prison

He was wrongly accused of raping eight women, but he says he's not angry ◐ 'It wouldn't heal me,' he says

JONATHAN HAYWARD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

A man who has been acquitted by the B.C. Appeal Court of raping eight women says he's not angry after spending 27 years in prison as he tried to get himself exonerated for crimes he didn't commit.

"It wouldn't heal me if I was angry," a jubilant Ivan Henry, now 63, said yesterday as he hugged his two daughters outside court.

"I've got grandkids that I'm so proud of.

"I've got a little dog that I look after, and he's my friend.

"I'd like to say to people who are still incarcerated, 'Don't give up. Keep plugging ahead and work to get out and to learn what society's all about. It's not all a dirty world. We're all here to try and help each other.'"

The appeal court justices were unanimous in quashing Henry's convictions and entering acquittals related to 10 counts involving rapes in Vancouver between May 1981 and June 1982.

The court heard that several mistakes were made by Crown lawyers and the judge at Henry's 1983 trial.

The Crown conceded that evidence wasn't disclosed to Henry as it should have been and if the man was tried again, a jury likely wouldn't convict him.

Marilyn Sandford, one of Henry's lawyers, said he did not just sit quietly in prison. "He brought application after application to the courts," she said.

EXECUTION DATE TO BE SET

LIFE'S CLOCK TICKING FOR THE ONLY CANADIAN ON DEATH ROW

An execution date is to be set next week for the only Canadian on death row in the United States, but Ronald Smith's lawyer intends to ask for an immediate stay.

Smith, 53, was convicted of fatally shooting two cousins, Harvey Madman Jr. and Thomas Running Rabbit, while high on drugs and alcohol in Montana in 1982.

He refused a plea deal that would have seen him avoid death row but spend his life in prison.

But Smith, from Red Deer, Alta., later had a change of heart and has been on a legal roller-coaster for the last 25 years. He has already been sentenced to death four times and had the order overturned on three occasions.

Canadian courts forced Stephen Harper's Conservative government to seek clemency for Smith last year after Ottawa initially balked at stepping in.

ONLINE INVESTING

Is self-directed investing right for you?

Over the last decade the Internet has shaped how consumers purchase goods and services. Investment products are no exception. With the availability and prevalence of investment information and online tools, a growing number of Canadian investors are managing all or some of their investment portfolio themselves.

For those people interested in self-directed investing, three questions they should ask themselves are:

1. Do I have a desire to have more control over my investments?
2. Am I interested in building my investment knowledge?
3. Am I comfortable with the Internet?

If the answers to the above three questions are yes, then you should consider self-directed investing.

Israel holding up construction: Jewish settlers

Settlers say defence minister withholding building plan approvals Issue is key in U.S-backed peace talks

THAER GANAIM/GETTY IMAGES

Ehud Barak

Jewish settlers accused their government on yesterday of holding up construction of more than 4,000 apartments in large West Bank settlements, suggesting that Israel is quietly complying with U.S. demands to reinstate a building moratorium that expired in late September.

The settlers, releasing their first concrete figures on what projects are being blocked, say Defence Minister Ehud Barak is imposing a silent freeze by withholding his final approval of building plans.

Barak's office did not immediately comment.

The issue of Israeli settlement construction has become a key sticking point in U.S.-backed peace talks, just weeks after their launch at a White House ceremony.

Israel has been under heavy pressure to renew its moratorium, which limited new construction in West Bank settlements.

Some 300,000 Israelis already live in West Bank settlements, and the Palestinians say there is no point in negotiating if Israel continues to build homes on land they claim for a future state.

Netanyahu has refused to extend the slowdown, though officials say they are in talks with Washington on reaching a compromise. The Palestinians, backed by the Arab world, have given the U.S. until early November to work out a deal.

Naftali Bennett, director of the Yesha Council settler umbrella group, told The Associated Press that a silent moratorium was in fact under way in large, urban settlements.

Some 4,300 apartments have all the necessary construction permits, but Barak hasn't authorized the state to put these projects up for bid, in effect freezing them, Bennett said.

Palestinian spokesman Ghassan Khatib said any drag on construction was "irrelevant" because construction continues elsewhere at a pace that outstrips that of recent years.

Trying to stop soldier suicides

Researchers hope a new three-year, $17-million study will help them reduce the rising number of suicides in the U.S. military by determining for the first time which prevention programs work and which don't.

The project announced in Denver yesterday is funded by the Army. It will be managed by the veterans medical centre in Denver and Florida State University. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Third time not always lucky

More tries aren't necessarily better when it comes to in vitro fertilization.

New research found that about one in three women had a baby the first time they tried a test tube embryo, and that improved to nearly one in two with a second try.

However, undergoing a third cycle boosted success rates very little and levelled off with subsequent attempts.

▶ U.S. President Barack Obama speaks at a Democratic National Committee rally last Friday.

Obama tries to buoy Democrats

◐ Mid-term elections Nov. 2 ◐ Republicans expected to take over House, make serious gains in the Senate

U.S. President Barack Obama is quietly using the power of his office to reach Democratic voters with less than a week remaining before congressional elections, balloting that is likely to give Republicans a majority in the House of Representatives and seriously snarl White House legislative prospects in the next two years.

Obama has kept up a frenzied pace of campaigning nationwide as he tries to invigorate the Democratic base, fearing the voters who swept him into the White House two years ago will not participate in this election without him on the ballot.

Obama would not face voters again until 2012.

This year's election — with Republicans, their Tea Party allies and many independents angry and blaming Obama for the country's continuing economic malaise — will decide contests for all 435 seats in the House, 37 places in the 100-member Senate and 37 state governorships.

AND THEN THERE WAS ONE.

Ontario is now the only province in Canada where dental assistants are not a regulated health profession. This means that dentists can hire people without formal education to do the work of dental assistants. Dental assistants take radiographs, are responsible for infection control and may perform other intra-oral duties.

The Ontario Dental Assistants Association (ODAA), the certifying body for Ontario dental assistants feels this is a matter of public safety. Dental patients have the right to know that everyone working in a dental office is educated and formally trained.

The Ontario government will not review the ODAA's request for regulation until 2013. Meanwhile, for the good of your oral health and safety, ask if your dentist hires only ODAA certified dental assistants.

Activists set to meet Japan's dolphin hunters

Star of The Cove will have audience with fishermen who perform controversial dolphin hunt in Taiji, Japan

A Japanese town whose annual dolphin hunt was bloodily depicted in the Oscar-winning documentary The Cove is hosting the first-ever meeting between anti-hunting activists and its fishermen to try to find common ground between the two sides.

The film portrayed the story of fishermen from Taiji who herd dolphins into a cove and stab them to death, turning the waters red with blood. It led to international condemnation of the hunt, but the people in Taiji defend the dolphin-killing as a tradition and livelihood that will continue.

Both sides will present their views at the Nov. 2 meeting, which will be open to the media but not the general public, organizer Atsushi Nakahira said yesterday.

Violent tradition

Taiji's annual dolphin hunt begins in September and continues through March.

- The town has traditionally sold the best-looking animals to aquariums and killed the rest.
- Taiji fishermen have said the area is too rocky for other ways to make a livelihood, such as farming or raising livestock.

Nakahira, leader of a pro-hunt group named Nihon Yonaoshikai, said an immediate solution to the divisive issue was unlikely, but he wanted to create a place where a dialogue could begin.

He said he was growing impatient with Taiji and other Japanese officials, and accused them of failing to stand up to defend their position to the media.

"There are always going to be people with different viewpoints on this Earth," he said in a telephone interview. "We have to first start by recognizing that these conflicting views coexist."

Motor bike rider accused of leaving two accident scenes

Police in London, Ont., have laid charges against a motorcycle driver alleged to have twice fled accident scenes.

Investigators say a passenger fell off a motorcycle when the driver accelerated through a stop sign after spotting police.

Police say the passenger received minor injuries and the driver did not stop.

Shortly afterwards, police say a motorcycle rider tried to flee after hitting a vehicle but was apprehended.

Twenty-five-year-old Adrean Angles, of London, is charged with dangerous operation of a motor vehicle, two counts of leaving the scene of an accident and Highway Traffic Act offences.

Police say he was a suspended driver.

ADVERTISING FEATURE

BED BUG EPIDEMIC

HEALTH ADVISORY: MUST READ

Thousands can live in our mattresses, they can spread to and from all furnitures/upholstery in the home, commonly spread from unit to unit in apartments. Purchasing bedding can be a large investment and the lifespan of that bedding is directly related to how well we care for it. Obviously the better care we take care of our furniture, and all of our possessions, the longer they will last. Purchasing an impermeable mattress cover, to protect the lifespan of your mattress is a huge step in the right direction. It is generally accepted that most people spend as much as a third of their lifespan in bed. Upon site of them all infected areas should be cleared of mattresses as the problem will only spread and worsen. That adds up to a great deal of wear and tear on your mattress. It is important to spend as much effort in protecting your mattress as you spend protecting the rest of the furniture in your home. Using an impermeable mattress cover can prevent damage that inevitably comes from moisture, mold or bed bugs and dust mites, which can affect your health; your good nights sleep as well as your investment. Water damage, which can lead to mold damage, is one obvious reason to cover your mattress. Spilling water or other liquids is not the only way moisture can seep into your mattress, staining is and leading to other problems. Rain and humidity, building up over a period of time, or mold and mildew growing in a cold climate can be a serious problem. And if you're a parent of young children are familiar with the damage that wetting the bed can cause. In fact this is the most common reasons that mattresses are thrown away. A mattress cover extends the lifespan enormously, helping to keep your mattress clean and new looking. Most mattresses are thrown away with minimal wear and tear. If you suffer from allergies, covers can help lower seasonal allergies. The causes of allergies like dust mites and pet dander can build up in the fabric of the mattress over time. With modern day bed bug infestations there are far more serious reasons to use an impermeable mattress cover. Bed bugs live on human blood and love warm environments such as your mattress. They live in most parts of the world and can lay up to 500 eggs, which hatch within 14 days and begin to feed immediately. The bed bug is a highly resilient creature and it can be extremely difficult to rid yourself of an infestation. The most effective way to block them is with a mattress cover. Available in a wide array of styles, features, materials and patterns it is easy to find just the right mattress cover for your needs. The Sleep Factory empathizes for those affected by bed bugs and is doing their part to contribute to improving public health. The coupon is only valid for those who are affected by bed bugs.

Nuns selling rare Honus Wagner card

Nun's brother owned it since 1936 Highest bid so far: $60,000

Sister Virginia Muller had never heard of shortstop Honus Wagner.

But she quickly learned the baseball great is a revered figure among collectors, and the most sought-after baseball card in history. And thanks to an unexpected donation, one of the century-old cards belongs to Muller and her order, the Baltimore-based School Sisters of Notre Dame.

The Roman Catholic nuns are auctioning off the card, which, despite its poor condition, is expected to fetch between $150,000 US and $200,000 US. The proceeds will go to their ministries in 35 countries around the world.

The card is part of the T206 series, produced between 1909 and 1911. About 60 Wagner cards are known to exist.

A near-mint-condition T206 Wagner card sold in 2007 for $2.8 million, the highest price ever for a baseball card.

The brother of a nun who died in 1999 left all his possessions to the order when he died earlier this year. The man's lawyer told Muller he had a Honus Wagner card in a safe-deposit box.

Who is Wagner?

Honus Wagner, nicknamed The Flying Dutchman, played for 21 seasons, 18 of them with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

- Wagner compiled a .328 career batting average and was one of the five original inductees into baseball's Hall of Fame.
- The card was printed during the prime of Wagner's career, but the American Tobacco Company ended production soon after it began. Some say Wagner didn't want to promote tobacco products to children.

▶ A new tape by Osama bin Laden threatens France.

Kill for a kill warning

Osama bin Laden sends an ominous warning to France New tape obtained by satellite TV station Al-Jazeera is believed to be genuine

France's interior minister says the risk of a terrorist attack against the country is "real."

But Brice Hortefeux said French officials' "vigilance is complete" after a newly posted threat by al-Qaida chief Osama bin Laden against French citizens.

Bin Laden wants to avenge France's support for the U.S.-led war in Afghanistan and a new law that will ban face-covering Muslim veils.

In a tape, bin Laden says: "It is a simple and clear equation: As you kill, you will be killed.

"As you capture, you will be captured."

He said the kidnapping of five French citizens in Niger was a reaction to France's oppression of Muslims.

Ex-Oilers boss must serve home detention

5 The Edmonton Oilers won five Stanley Cups during Peter Pocklington's ownership.

Former Edmonton Oilers owner Peter Pocklington was sentenced yesterday to six months of home detention for making false statements in his Southern California bankruptcy case.

U.S. District Judge Virginia Phillips in Riverside also ordered Pocklington, 68, to serve two years probation, pay $3,000 in fines and perform 100 hours of community service.

Pocklington pleaded guilty to a single perjury count in May and could have received a maximum 10-year prison term.

He was arrested last year at his Palm Desert home.

Prosecutors said he concealed assets during bankruptcy proceedings in which he claimed to have about $3,000 and owed more than $19 million, including nearly $13 million in principal and interest from a loan the Alberta government said it provided Pocklington's meatpacking company in 1988.

Pocklington acquired the Oilers in the late 1970s and stunned fans when he traded Wayne Gretzky to the Los Angeles Kings in 1988.

He sold the club in 1998.

N.L. Liberals under fire for email 'jest'

Former journalist asks if Premier Danny Williams has a mental health problem

The Liberals Opposition in Newfoundland and Labrador is standing by its recently hired communications director who wrote an email to the office of Danny Williams 20 months ago asking if the premier had a mental health problem.

The email was raised by Municipal Affairs Minister Kevin O'Brien on a VOCM radio program to question the direction the Liberals are taking.

But the Liberal's interim leader, Kelvin Parsons, says the email from former journalist Craig Westcott to Elizabeth Matthews, Williams's communications director, was meant in jest and shows the premier's office is trying to discredit Westcott.

He is accusing the premier's office of taking the email out of context to discredit Westcott, who ran unsuccessfully for the federal Conservative party in a riding in St. John's in 2008.

Matthews said the premier's office will not comment on the email, which it released to The Canadian Press.

The email, dated Feb. 27, 2009, is from Westcott in his capacity as editor of The Business Post and asks Matthews if Williams has been treated for a mental illness.

Provincial SIU called in over crash near Belleville

The provincial Special Investigations Unit has been called in to investigate a traffic accident that injured a man being followed by police near Belleville.

Provincial police said Highway 37 was closed about 5 a.m. after the driver was hurt when he hit a hydro pole.

At 4:30 a.m. yesterday, OPP responded to a call from Tweed, alerting police to a male suspect seen in a vehicle that had allegedly been stolen in Halton Region.

When approached by officers, police said, the suspect took off in the vehicle.

Police also said the driver was a suspect in several vehicle break-ins in Tweed overnight.

A 26-year-old man from Paris, near Hamilton, was transported to hospital for treatment of serious, but non-life-threatening injuries.

Police said charges are pending against the injured man.

Former Argentine president Nestor Kirchner — the country's most powerful politician along with his wife, current leader Cristina Fernandez — died suddenly yesterday after suffering a heart attack, the presidency said.

Kirchner, 60, died after he was rushed in grave condition to the Formenti de Calafate hospital while having a severe heart attack, the presidency said.

"It was a sudden death," his personal doctor, Luis Buonomo, told reporters in El Calafate, where Kirchner and his wife had gone to rest and await their turn to be counted in the nation's census. Buonomo said an official medical report would be released later in the day.

He was accompanied at all times by his wife, the presidency said.

Kirchner, 60, had undergone an angioplasty after a heart attack in September, but was still a likely candidate in next year's presidential elections.

Galloway's coming to Kenney's town

Immigration minister denounced Galloway last year because of alleged financial support of Hamas ◐ Ottawa considers Hamas a terrorist group

Firebrand politician George Galloway is bringing his fight with Jason Kenney straight to the immigration minister's Calgary riding.

The former British MP will launch a tour of 10 Canadian cities next month, including a stop in Calgary Nov. 23.

Earlier this month in Toronto, Galloway donned a pair of red mittens as if they were boxing gloves, challenged Kenney to a debate and promised to sue the minister for slander.

The gesture came after immigration officials let Galloway into the country following a Federal Court ruling that was critical of the government.

Kenney has said he disagrees with the judge's finding that the initial move to keep Galloway out of Canada was politically motivated.

In a release, Galloway said he will speak about his fight with the Canadian government and the political situation in the Middle East and Asia.

Sudanese leader dodges reach of international court

The ICC has no police force and relies on states to arrest suspects Al-Bashir refuses to recognize the court's authority, has vowed to never turn himself in

An African president wanted for genocide was expected in Nairobi for a weekend summit, but as the International Criminal Court asked Kenya to arrest him, the venue was switched to a country beyond the court's reach, officials said yesterday.

The summit is now to take place in Ethiopia, which doesn't recognize the International Criminal Court. Sudanese President Omar al-Bashir, the wanted man, visited Ethiopia in April 2009 soon after he was first indicted by the ICC. The change of summit venue raises questions about whether regional leaders have the will to bring al-Bashir to justice for atrocities committed in Darfur, in western Sudan.

▶ Omar al-Bashir

The weekend meeting held by the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) brings together the leaders of six East African nations to discuss two referenda in Sudan in January that could see the southern part of Africa's biggest country break away. There are fears that if the referenda are postponed, a civil war could re-ignite in Sudan.

The ICC, based in The Hague, Netherlands, made public a request Tuesday to Kenya to arrest al-Bashir if he enters the country.

Kenya is obligated to arrest al-Bashir, even though it failed to do so when he made a visit in August. That failure was heavily criticized, including in a statement by U.S. President Barack Obama.

Youths work to heal old wounds

Mistrust between Serbs, Kosovo's ethnic Albanians stems from bloody crackdown during 1998-99 war

As Serbia and Kosovo brace for EU-mediated talks, a group of young people have been one step ahead, organizing yesterday a rare public dialogue of its own.

The debate in the Serbian capital, Belgrade, gathered five people from Serbia and their five guests from Kosovo, who discussed a range of topics, from everyday life to politics.

Organizers from Youth Initiative for Human Rights group say the idea is to open communication between the young people from the two nations split by war.

"This is only the beginning," explained activist Dusan Lopusina. "We want the young to bond."

This seemed to come naturally for the participants in the dialogue held before a small audience at a cultural centre in downtown Belgrade.

"We have so many things in common," said Krenar Shala, from Kosovo. "We share the same values, we have the same problems."

Free-trade pact risks jobs: Study

Manufacturing industry would bear brunt if deal with EU signed

A new report says Canada stands to lose as many as 150,000 jobs if it signs a free-trade agreement with the European Union.

A paper written for the left-leaning Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives says previous free-trade agreements have widened Canada's trade deficit by boosting imports more than exports. Canada already has a large trade deficit with the EU, and the imbalance is made worse by the fact that Canada's exports to the continent largely consist of raw resources, while it imports more technology-intensive products.

The report finds that Canada will lose 28,000 jobs if tariffs are mutually eliminated, and this could leap to 150,000 jobs if the loonie continues to appreciate against the euro.

Canada's economy would shrink by as much as three per cent if tariffs are eliminated and the Canadian dollar continues to strengthen.

The paper, written by Canadian Auto Workers economist Jim Stanford, says the manufacturing industry would bear the brunt of the impact.

Canadian home prices rose just 0.2 per cent in August from July in the latest sign that prices are moderating across the country, according to the Teranet-National Bank home price index.

But prices were up 10 per cent in August from a year earlier. Toronto and Vancouver both showed a 12 per cent, year-over-year price gain in August, Ottawa 10.7 per cent, Halifax 6.8 per cent and Calgary five per cent.

Nunavut gets taste of Tim Hortons

KEN FAUGHT/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

You will soon be able to order a Tim Hortons coffee in Iqaluit, Nunavut, the last province or territory that has been without a location.

The North West Co. said yesterday it has signed a deal to open three kiosk locations in the territorial capital in December.

The kiosks will be in the retailer's NorthMart locations. "This delivers convenience and accessibility for our customers, in addition to a great product," said Michael McMullen, executive vice-president of North West's Northern Canada retail division.

As of July 4, Tim Hortons had 3,627 restaurants, including 3,040 in Canada and 587 in the United States.

"We are excited to finally bring the Tim Hortons experience to the Iqaluit community and The North West Company is the right franchisee to help us deliver value and fresh product to our guests," said Nick Javor, senior vice-president of corporate affairs at Tim Hortons.

"You could say it's overdue. If we can be in Kandahar (Afghanistan), why can't we be in Iqaluit?"

Surge helps TSX operator boost dividend

Group has benefitted from growing interest among foreign firms Now has 300 international listings

A resurgence in some trading activity has enabled Toronto Stock Exchange operator TMX Group Inc. to raise its dividend for the first time since equity markets crashed and sparked a global financial crisis.

"The resurgence in activity across some of our key revenue drivers, combined with focused cost control led, to strong growth in our bottom line," chief executive Thomas Kloet told analysts during a conference call yesterday to discuss the group's third-quarter results.

The five per cent dividend boost — to 40 cents per share — is a sign the group is confident about the future, Kloet said. This is the first time since 2007 it has raised its dividend.

"With confidence we thought that we could raise the dividend and reward the shareholders."
THOMAS KLOET, CEO TMX GROUP INC.

TMX Group, which also operates the Montreal Stock Exchange and the Toronto Venture Exchange, reported third-quarter net income of $50.8 million, or 68 cents per share, yesterday.

That beat analyst expectations of 64 cents per share, according to a survey by Thomson Reuters, and compared with a profit of $41.7 million, or 56 cents per share, a year earlier.

Revenues rose eight per cent to $141.6 million, slightly above analyst predictions. Meanwhile, the volume of trading in derivatives was up 28 per cent at the Montreal Exchange.

TMX said it has been able to keep costs fairly flat over last two years despite taking on new initiatives and those lower expenses also helped drive profits higher in the third quarter.

Restructuring dings Corus's Q4 profits

Corus in the midst of consolidation of its operations in Toronto 11 different facilities moved under one roof

Corus Entertainment Inc. says a series of charges related to a corporate restructuring during the summer contributed to lower fourth-quarter profits, but added that won't prevent an increase in its dividend.

The Toronto-based media company's net income amounted to $6.8 million in the three months ended Aug. 31, down 64 per cent compared with $18.7 million a year earlier.

On an earnings per share basis, profits were eight cents, well below analyst expectations of 28 cents per share, according to a survey by Thomson Reuters. The results included a $12.9-million charge related to its restructuring, and $7.9 million in radio tariffs.

Corus says quarterly revenue increased nearly four per cent to $202.8 million, but fell short of average expectations of $207 million.

Revenue for the specialty TV channels rose three per cent to $139.9 million.

The radio segment, which has been slower to recover from the 2008-09 recession, saw revenue increase five per cent to $62.9 million.

WHAT DO YOU DO WHEN JOKE'S ON YOU?

He says ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE

When people hear I perform live comedy, they often say, "I could never do that. What if I bombed?"

Allow me to offer a recent report from the front lines. I'm still removing the shrapnel.

I bombed this week. Badly. We're talking Hiroshima, Nagasaki, and Mike Myers' The Love Guru combined. This measured on seismographs. Picture Sylvester Stallone running toward the camera in slow motion with a fiery ball of unfunny expanding behind him.

Bombing is often called dying, but it's worse than death.

In fact, a doctor once told me that I might die while I was in hospital. I faced that possibility with quiet thoughtfulness.

But when I died on stage my response was something akin to a kid who drops his ice cream cone combined with those Palestinian women you see mourning on television.

I've failed before during my seven years of performing. But it was usually with other performers and maybe lasted 10 minutes.

But this time I was the sole performer and I was performing for, give or take, all eternity.

My job was to entertain people during a fitness class while they were on the floor doing their sculpting exercises. I pretended to be The Before Guy from TV commercial fame.

This earned me vaguely sad stares — the sort of looks I expect to get 50 years from now when people are saying, "They did a good job with the corpse."

"When jokes bomb on television there's often the sound of crickets, but man, I'd have killed for a cricket. I'd have chatted it up ..."

After this 30-minute ordeal, the positive voices in my head tried to cheer me up: This schtick has worked elsewhere, a half-hour is a long time for solo improv, etc. But it was a scattered message, like the Liberal party's.

The negative voice in my head had the message discipline of Stephen Harper: "You suck," it said, over and over.

When jokes bomb on television there's often the sound of crickets, but man, I'd have killed for a cricket. I'd have chatted it up, asked where it was from, what it did for a living.

I would also have welcomed a tumbleweed. I could have left on it.

As to the question, "What would I do if I bombed?" You feel bad, like you were dumped from a minor relationship, or you lost a hockey game in overtime.

And then you get over it.

If you never leave the trench because you're afraid of bombs, you'll never win the war. Am I right?

Who's with me?

(Sound of crickets.)

Clampdown useless: EU

Worth mentioning

European air officials accused the United States of imposing useless and overly intrusive travel security measures, calling yesterday for the Obama administration to re-examine policies ranging from online security checks to X-raying shoes.

British Airways' chairman made the first in a wave of complaints, saying in a speech to airport operators that removing shoes and taking laptops out of bags were "completely redundant" measures demanded by the U.S. He was joined less than 24 hours later by British pilots, the owner of Heathrow airport, other European airlines, and the European Union. The EU submitted formal objections to a program that requires U.S.-bound travellers from 35 nations to complete online security clearance before departure. It called the system burdensome and said it could violate travellers' privacy. The EU said the U.S. Electronic System for Travel Authorization would process some 13 million registrations from Europeans in 2009 alone. The program applies to Europeans who don't need visas to travel to the U.S.

The EU said it was "inconsistent with the often repeated commitment by the U.S. to facilitate trans-Atlantic mobility and legitimate travel and trade in a secure environment."

Metro Minute with lawn elephant

Gather round, children, as we tell you the story of the giant white elephant and the front lawn.

From time immemorial (or roughly several human years), the yard at 77 Yarmouth Rd., just north of Christie Pits, has been home to a six-foot tusker.

The sculpture, a thesis project by OCAD student Matt Donovan, sat in his parents' basement until he gave it away to his buddy, James Lawson.

On Halloweens past, Lawson — with a wonderful sense of humour — has attired his "pet" with an eye patch, hat, and swashbuckling sword.

Not as scary as those creepy garden gnomes, but definitely more fun.

STOP HAIR LOSS

BEST IN CANADA #1 TOP SELLER CANADA

BIO-FEN PLUS™ is a natural health product used in the treatment of hereditary androgenic alopecia (AGA) in adults (male or female pattern baldness.) It contains scientifically calculated proportions of extracts of fenugreek seeds, saw palmetto berries and flax lignans. Each are known to possess an inhibitor of the enzyme responsible for causing male or female pattern baldness. It also contains a mixture of B vitamins, folate and biotin to help metabolize these herbal extracts so that they are more bio-available, and to support the growth of strong and healthy hair.

How does BIO-FEN PLUS™ work?

Specific compounds within the herbal extracts inhibit the 5-alpha-reductase (and therefore reduce DHT) to prevent or slow down the rate of hair loss. This process is the principle by which the prescription drugs such as Propecia (finasteride) work. However, BIO-FEN PLUS™ also contains additional compounds which remove excess cholesterol and testosterone – the building blocks of DHT.

BIO-FEN PLUS™ also contains vitamins to increase blood flow to the small capillaries that feed the hair roots, to deliver the active herbal compounds and remove waste. Therefore, BIO-FEN PLUS™ provides a natural, safer alternative to expensive drugs, and/or expensive & painful hair transplants. As with the prescription alternatives, results vary from person to person, and no one product will work for everyone.

How long must I use BIO-FEN PLUS™ ?

BIO-FEN PLUS™ capsules are usually effective at stopping hair loss within the first two months. However, since healthy hair grows only about 1 cm each month, it may take up to three months before you notice that hair growth is increased or further hair loss is stopped.

Anyone experiencing new growth will see it within four to six months. Once results become apparent, some users are able to reduce their BIO-FEN PLUS™ supplement dose to one capsule every second or every third day. Some clients will continue to take BIO-FEN PLUS™ daily. Once you stop completely, however, your hair growth pattern will slowly go back to the point where you started.

How safe is BIO-FEN PLUS™ ?

The ingredient combination in BIO-FEN PLUS™ is generally safe for most adults. However, the following cautions are advised:

Folic acid: Consult a health care practitioner if you are uncertain whether or not you are taking adequate vitamin B12, as folate supplementation can mask a Vitamin B12 deficiency.

Vitamin B3: Consult a health care practitioner prior to use if you have impaired liver function.

Vitamin B6: Consult a health care practitioner prior to use if you are taking levodopa.

What is the quality of BIO-FEN PLUS™ ?

BIO-FEN PLUS™ is manufactured in Canada according to a quality assurance program called Good Manufacturing Practices (GMP). This ensures that the ingredients are tested for their level of quality, potency & purity, prior to production and again prior to sale.

See our website to locate your nearest Health Food Store or Pharmacy that offers BIO-FEN PLUS™ and other quality products from Hair Grow Technology.

If you have any questions or comments about our products that target hair loss and support the growth of strong, healthy hair, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Jerry Springer is celebrating its 20th season ◆ Springer says the show started to get 'crazy' when he decided to bring young people on ◆ Now, the idea of a midget standing on a table to start a food fight or passionately kissing her sister doesn't seem so shocking anymore

FILE PHOTO

▶ The former mayor of Cincinnati, Jerry Springer was a local news anchor when he was assigned to host a new talk show.

The tumultuous 20

Springer's theatre of the absurd is like video wallpaper now, as he celebrated his 20th season on the air thias week with an episode filmed in New York's Times Square that plays back some of the memorable wig-pulling, chin-smacking and turkey-tossing moments of the past.

Springer's show doesn't get high ratings, not like in the early 1990s when he briefly challenged The Oprah Winfrey Show for supremacy.

Springer infrequently stands on his show's stage, usually prowling with a microphone among audience members and acting like a ringmaster for themed programs such as Wives Battle Mistresses, Midget Holiday Hell and Guess What? I'm a Man! Transsexuals revealing their secret to dating partners.

Former U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett called talk show hosts like Springer "perpetrators of cultural rot," in a 1995 news conference aimed at cleaning up daytime TV where he was joined by U.S. Sen. Joseph Lieberman, I-Conn.

"I don't watch the show, but it's not aimed at 66-year-old men."
JERRY SPRINGER

Now Springer films his episodes in a production facility in Lieberman's hometown of Stamford, Conn.

Politicians have largely moved on from Springer. (Representatives for Bennett and Lieberman did not immediately return calls for comment.)

Many of the stations that air Springer pair his show with others hosted by Steve Wilkos, a former Springer security guard, and the colorful Maury Povich, he said.

Springer, a former mayor of Cincinnati, was a local news anchor in the same city when his station's parent company assigned him to host a new talk show. The first episode aired in September 1991.

At first, it was conventional, chasing after the same audience of middle-aged women that Oprah Winfrey owned. Springer said he made his only substantive decision on the show's future: go young.

"We decided to have young people on the stage, young people in the audience and young subject matter," he said. "Well, young people are much more open about their lives. They're much wilder, and that's when the show started to go crazy."

For the first fight — an audience member rushing the stage to confront a Ku Klux Klan member — Springer didn't even have security guards. He worried the show would be in trouble. It wasn't.

When the show's rights were first bought out, "they said from now on we're only allowed to do crazy," Springer said.

"The culture of television changed," he said. "The world didn't change. There's nothing that's ever been on any of our shows that a grownup didn't know existed. There's nothing shocking in the show. What was shocking was that we had never seen it on television before."

The Bravo network says it's bringing former American Idol judge Kara DioGuardi back to TV in a series of her own.

Going Platinum will be a song-writing competition that pits contestants against one another as they live together, all vying for a $100,000 grand prize.

DioGuardi will be head judge of the 10-episode series.

Singer-songwriter Jewel will serve as host.

Going Platinum is scheduled to premiere next year, Bravo announced Tuesday.

DioGuardi, who has written hit songs for such artists as Carrie Underwood and Pink, was a judge on American Idol the past two seasons.

Bravo is a unit of NBC Universal.

Ads shrink with attention spans

And now, a word from our sponsors. A very brief word.

TV commercials are shrinking along with attention spans and advertising budgets. The 15-second ad is increasingly common, gradually supplanting the 30-second spot just as it knocked off the full-minute pitch decades ago.

For viewers, it means more commercials in a more rapid-fire format. For advertisers, shorter commercials are a way to save some money, and research shows they hold on to more eyeballs than the longer format.

"It used to be that the most valuable thing on the planet was time, and now the most valuable thing on the planet is attention," says John Greening, associate professor at Northwestern University's journalism school and a former executive vice-president at ad agency DDB Chicago.

Or the "most interesting man in the world," the suave, rugged, Spanish-accented character pitching Dos Equis beer, appearing just long enough to turn his head and weigh in on the topic of rollerblading. (Verdict? A deadpan "No.")

The number of 15-second television commercials has jumped more than 70 per cent in five years to nearly 5.5 million last year, according to Nielsen. They made up 34 per cent of all national ads on the air last year, up from 29 per cent in 2005.

Commercial-skipping digital video recorders and distractions such as laptops and phones have shortened viewers' attention spans, says Deborah Mitchell, executive director of the Center for Brand and Product Management at the University of Wisconsin.

Viewers are also watching TV streamed on sites like Hulu, where advertisers have less of a presence.

So companies figure: "Why spend money on anything longer anyway? Plus, if they're going to skip our ads, at least we have a better chance of them seeing something if it's really short."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Attention deficit

- On average, about five per cent of an audience viewing a 15-second commercial will give up on it.
- The number jumps to about six per cent for 30 seconds and 6.5 per cent for 60 seconds, says Jeff Boehme, chief research officer for Kantar Media.

Rec.'s uncertain return

back the harvest festival in the town and everybody thinks she's crazy," Hiscock said.

"They pulled it years ago and it wasn't doing very well but she's (positive) it's going to be a success."

Hiscock says he's in the dark as to when Parks and Recreation will return, but he's still hoping to slip back into NBC's Thursday night comedy lineup. In Canada, the series aired on Citytv.

Parks and Recreation was shelved as a mid-season replacement earlier this year when NBC revealed a fall schedule that put the Mumbai-set comedy Outsourced in its Thursday night time slot.

Outsourced seemed to cement its hold as a follow-up to The Office when NBC announced recently it had ordered a full season of the lighthearted comedy, set in an Indian call centre that sells novelty products for a U.S. company.

In the meantime, Hiscock says producers are doing what they can to keep fans interested in Parks and Recreation by posting weekly online photo essays featuring each cast member.

"We were thinking about (doing) webisodes – we started writing them but we don't have the time to really do it," said Hiscock, whose writing credits include King of the Hill, Saturday Night Live, Corner Gas and Kids in the Hall.

"Once we started doing webisodes we realized, 'Oh no, then we're sort of revealing stuff that's going to be on the air coming up and do we really want to do that?' And then we had to start thinking, 'Do webisodes have to stand alone?' And then it became a big thing to think about."

Recent posts include a slideshow of backstage practical jokes from Aziz Ansari (who plays Tom), weight-gain tips from Chris Pratt (who plays Andy), and a snarky tour of the Hollywood lot where the show is shot by Aubrey Plaza (who plays April).

While the upcoming season features new cast members Rob Lowe and Adam Scott as state auditors, Hiscock says the overall structure remains unchanged. # Biebs to rock AMAs

A newlywed, a teen heartthrob and a glittery pop star are set to take the stage at the 38th annual American Music Awards.

Katy Perry, Justin Bieber and Ke$ha will make their debuts on the AMAs next month, producers said yesterday. All three are multiple nominees, and all are up for artist of the year, along with Lady Gaga and Eminem.

Bieber is nominated for four awards. Ke$ha and Perry have three bids each. Eminem and Lady Antebellum lead nominees with five apiece.

Sixteen-year-old Bieber, who recently released his autobiography, said he's "extremely humbled and honoured" to be part of the show, which honours the most popular albums and artists.

"As a small-town kid from Canada, I never imagined that I would be nominated for AMAs, let alone be performing on the show," he said without hinting at what song he plans to perform.

Ke$ha said she's excited for her "first big American awards-show performance" and humbled to be nominated for artist of the year with some of her idols.

"To have my name nominated alongside them really solidifies the impact I've had on American pop culture and pop music the past year," she said. "I'm really honoured and definitely going to cover America in glitter."

She said she'll perform a medley that includes her new single, We Are Who We Are.

Perry, who married comedian Russell Brand last week, didn't reveal her performance plans.

Other artists slated to perform at the show include Christina Aguilera, Bon Jovi, Usher and P!nk.

The American Music Awards will be presented Nov. 21 at the Nokia Theatre and broadcast live on ABC. Music fans can choose the winners by voting online.

Junos heading to Quebec?

Juno Awards organizers are discussing bringing the show to Quebec for the first time.

Melanie Berry, head of the organization that runs the Junos, thinks the gala will return to the road in 2012 after next year's 40th anniversary show in Toronto.

"(We) haven't been to Quebec, and that's always under discussion," Berry, president of the Canadian Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, said in an interview Tuesday.

"We're a national show. We should be there."

For years, the Juno celebration was held exclusively in Toronto, before organizers moved a few shows to Hamilton and Vancouver in the 1990s.

Beginning in 2002, the show then began moving cities each year. The only provinces that the Junos have yet to visit are New Brunswick, P.E.I. and Quebec. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Swift speaks to her peers

Taylor Swift
Album: Speak Now
Label: Open Road
●●●●
The songs of Taylor Swift have an incredible ability to hit upon the universal themes of the post-adolescent all-American girl. They may not reflect reality, but they certainly play into the supposed-to-be reality of a sugar-and-spice world.

Her themes, supposedly drawn from her sheltered oh-so-perfect life, deal with heartache (Dear John), love found (Mine), lost love (Back to December) and love's betrayal (Mean). These are songs of the high-school prom. Even Innocent, the strangely patronizing track written for Kanye West, is written from the perspective of the prom queen who's moment of glory is suddenly dashed by a steaming bucket of crap. And the title track Speak Now is a wonderfully crafted dream scene of what every young woman would like to do at an ex-boyfriend's wedding day.

This is the appeal of Taylor Swift. She manages to capture that teen angst with an expert's eye while actually living it. She has an undeniable gift for melody and lyric. It's still to be seen whether she can carry this irresistibility with relevance into full adulthood. Chances are that she will. Outstanding track: Dear John

John O'Regan's solo work as Diamond Rings has experienced the kind of hype where only a flawless debut album could justify it all. But Special Affections lives up to the impossible expectations even with the GarageBand production and minimalist approach. It's been eight years since Bryan Ferry, former singer of Roxy Music, released his last disc of original music and, it's a shame it took this long for him to put out this record. While the disc doesn't sound much like his old band, it's still got that boundary pushing creativity that made him famous. The record is full of lush, epic and atmospheric pop sounds and it's loaded with A-list guests including Flea, Dave Stewart and David Gilmour.

Warpaint
Album: The Fool
Label: Rough Trade
●●●●
The debut album from L.A.'s Warpaint is cut from a similar cloth as the ethereal and spacious dream pop Cocteau Twins popularized three decades ago. But The Fool is no homage, as the all-girl trio pack their wispy harmonies and snaking guitar lines with sputtering post-punk rhythms. When they work best, the band produce dizzying, hypnotic results, like with the off-tempo pacing of Composure. Their debut is a confident and mesmeric statement.

Jeremy Fisher
Album: Flood
Label: Aquarius
●●●½
There's an unbridled optimism about the music of Jeremy Fisher that would be hard to take if the Hamilton-born singer-songwriter didn't drop in the occasional bomb of a lyric like "... the things that we will do to see a naked girl" in the song Naked Girl or the sublimely understated "my sugar makes you poor" in Laissez Faire. Wrapped in the melodies of a campfire singalong, tracks like these deliver their simple messages of social justice in a quietly effective manner.

Pair of Avatar sequels planned

Cameron working on scripts for 'self-contained' stories as follow up to blockbuster Expected to be released December 2014 and December 2015

James Cameron will start writing the scripts for two Avatar sequels early next year, aiming to land the first one in theatres four years from now.

Executives at 20th Century Fox announced yesterday that Cameron has settled on two sequels to the blockbuster hit as his next film projects with plans to begin production in late 2011. The studio hopes to have the first of the as-yet-untitled sequels in theatres in December 2014, with the third movie of the franchise following in December 2015.

Cameron will decide whether to shoot the films back-to-back after he completes the scripts for the sequels to his sci-fi sensation. Set on the distant Pandora, Avatar is the biggest modern blockbuster, with $2.8 billion at the box office worldwide.

"In the second and third films, which will be self-contained stories that also fulfil a greater story arc, we will not back off the throttle of Avatar's visual and emotional horsepower, and will continue to explore its themes and characters, which touched the hearts of audiences in all cultures around the world," Cameron said in a news release.

"I'm looking forward to returning to Pandora, a world where our imaginations can run wild."

Cameron had been up in the air on what he would do next, telling reporters as recently as last week that he had not decided whether to shoot another film before returning to his Avatar saga.

The studio was anxious to get back into the Avatar business.

"We had no higher priority, and can feel no greater joy, than enabling Jim to continue and expand his vision of the world of Avatar," Fox studio bosses Jim Gianopulos and Tom Rothman said in a statement.

"Avatar is not only the highest grossing movie of all time but it is a created universe based on the singular imagination and daring of James Cameron, who also raised the consciousness of people worldwide to some of the greatest issues facing our planet."

Avatar follows the adventures of a man in alien form who falls for a 10-foot, blue-skinned native of the distant moon Pandora, where greedy humans wage war over the land's natural resources.

Sacha Baron Cohen, seen here as his character Bruno, is being sued by a man who says his civil rights were violated when he tried to film Bruno at a gay marriage rally.

Cameraman says Bruno film crew roughed him up

A cameraman sued Sacha Baron Cohen on Tuesday, claiming his civil rights were violated when he was roughed up by a film crew shooting the comedian in character as Bruno during a gay marriage rally.

Mike Skiff, a self-described gay journalist, sued Baron Cohen and others involved in the 2009 film Bruno for more than $25,000 in damages for alleged physical and emotional pain and suffering.

His lawsuit claims he was shoved, pulled and threatened with wooden signs as he filmed the comedian in character as gay Austrian fashion journalist Bruno.

The lawsuit said Skiff recognized Baron Cohen during the pro-gay marriage rally in downtown Los Angeles in Nov 2, 2008, and began filming him.

Footage posted on YouTube by Skiff's company, Third Rail Media, showed the actor-comedian standing among anti-gay marriage protesters who had also assembled in the streets.

A man is heard shouting, "I know that's Bruno — I can get as much as I want," before being harangued by the crew. One portion of the video shows Skiff pulled away from Baron Cohen before police intervene.

An email sent to Baron Cohen's publicist, Matt Labov, was not immediately returned.

Skiff also claimed the actions of the Bruno crew violated his civil rights and that their appearance at the rally was intended solely to create conflict for the film.

Baron Cohen's in-your-face comedy has provoked several lawsuits since his 2006 film, Borat: Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan, became a smash hit, but courts have sided with the comedian.

Bruno also has sparked its share of legal wrangling.

In June 2009, Richelle Olson sued, claiming she suffered brain injuries when Baron Cohen caused her to fall after a confrontation at a charity bingo tournament in Lancaster, Calif. The case is on hold while the woman's attorney appeals a court ruling.

In December, a Palestinian shopkeeper portrayed as a terrorist in Bruno sued Baron Cohen and others for libel and slander.

The Bethlehem shopkeeper and father is identified in the film as a member of the militant Al-Aqsa Martyrs' Brigade. He is seeking $110 million, and the case remains pending in a Washington, D.C. court.

Hobbit movies staying in New Zealand

Two $500 million Hobbit movies will be made in New Zealand as originally planned, Prime Minister John Key said yesterday, after two days of crisis talks with Hollywood studio executives.

Senior executives from Warner Bros. and New Line Cinema won an agreement for a change in labour law and bigger tax breaks to keep the project in New Zealand after a dispute over pay and conditions for actors threw the production into turmoil last week.

The studios had warned that unless the threat of labour action was removed, production of the two movies would be moved to another country.

MARTY MELVILLE/GETTY IMAGES

Peter Jackson is set to direct a pair of Hobbit movies in New Zealand after a dispute almost forced a location change.

The dispute became a national issue in New Zealand, which received a boost to its tourism and film-making industries after The Lord of the Rings trilogy was made here. Hundreds of people marched in several cities Monday to show their support for keeping production in New Zealand.

The Hobbit is J.R.R. Tolkien's prequel to The Lord of the Rings.

Key says the package includes an extra tax break of NZ$20 million ($15 million) for the studios, on top of $45 million already pledged by the government.

Economists have said the overall value of producing the films in New Zealand would add up to 2 billion New Zealand dollars ($1.5 billion) to the local economy — nearly 2 per cent of annual gross domestic production.

The crisis over production of the two movies unfolded after New Zealand Actors' Equity imposed an international "no work" boycott on the project last month after director Peter Jackson refused to hold talks on wages and conditions for local actors.

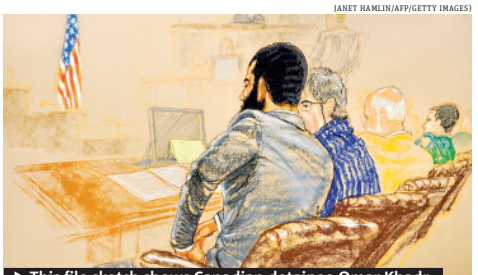
Exploring the story of Khadr's stay at Gitmo

ADAM NAYMAN
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

JANET HAMLIN/AFP/GETTY IMAGES)



▶ This file sketch shows Canadian detainee Omar Khadr. The documentary You Don't Like the Truth explores video of an interrogation of a then 16-year-old Khadr.

The new documentary You Don't Like the Truth is built around a videotape taken in 2003. It shows a then-16-year-old Omar Khadr being interrogated in his cell at Guantanamo Bay by agents of CSIS.

"We'd always been interested in Khadr's story, but we hadn't thought of making a film about it," says the fillm's co-diretor Luc Cote, who developed the project with Patricio Henriquez over a period of two years.

"The release of that footage in 2008 was really the trigger: we saw a clip on TV, and we thought it was incredible and terrible at the same time."

As Cote suggests, the footage in You Don't Like the Truth is both literally and figuratively hard to watch: The grainy, degraded surveillance tape and muffled audio put Khadr's anxiety into sharp relief.

The clips are interspersed with interviews with Khadr's lawyer and family members, as well as former cellmates and American military personnel.

These testimonies interweave to suggest that the Toronto-born teen, who was accused of throwing a grenade that killed a U.S. soldier, received questionable treatment not only from his American captors but also his countrymen.

The impact on the film on Khadr's legal fate may be considerable: Cote and Henriquez were asked if it could be shown as part of his lawyer's final arguments. Cote says he was pleased by the request.

"If this was the only showing, then it would have made the film worth doing," but implies that You Don't Like The Truth does more than shed light on one individual's experience," he said.

"Let's not forget that (this footage) is all we've really seen from Guantanamo in nine years," he says.

Seeing men through a woman's point of view

PHIL BROWN
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Bette Gordon might not be the most prolific filmmaker working today (only three produced features since the 1980s), but her work has been met with almost universal acclaim.

Variety and Luminous Motion established her as one of America's most preeminent female filmmakers with a feminist bent. Which makes it surprising that her latest effort is Handsome Harry, a film about an aging Navy vet haunted by his past.

"At first glance it would seem to be the opposite of the work that I had done before," Gordon says.

"Handsome Harry is a very male film, but made through a female lens. I ended up exploring similar material that I've done before, just coming at it form a different angle."

▶ Jamey Sheridan stars in Handsome Harry.

As different as Handsome Harry is from Gordon's previous films, it works remarkably well. Always known as a visual stylist, she kept things simple in her new film and discovered a new focus.

"Instead of leading with the camera, I led with the actors," says Gordon. "I was really interested in a character story, which is something I hadn't quite done before."

The director used the film as an opportunity to work with a variety of character actors whom she'd befriended over the years, including Jamey Sheridan, Steve Buscemi, and Campbell Scott.

"It was a character film, so it was very important to me how I cast and who I cast," says Gordon.

"Each actor brought so much to their part and really redefined the film while they were onscreen."

Now that the five-year labor of Handsome Harry is over, Gordon is looking for a new project.

Though she hopes it isn't another decade before her next movie, the full-time film professor and Columbia University has realistic expectations.

"I'm always working, but it's just difficult to find support, especially in this environment. Filmmaking requires an enormous amount of passion and stamina because so many people say 'no,'" says Gordon.

Its tough, but I have to will it into being."

Plenty of Screems at Exhibition

Toronto's playground stocks up on scary New Vampire Lounge bar lets adults put their feet up post-fright

RAF BRUSILOW
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Halloween scares abound this month as ghouls, vampires and flesh-eating zombies invade Exhibition Place for Screemers.

The yearly fright-fest runs on select nights through Halloween, and features six haunted attractions including a 3-D maze that has entrants put on a pair of 3-D glasses as they skulk around.

New this year is the Vampire Lounge, a fully licensed bar area complete with servers in devilishly risqué costumes delivering drinks — like Blood Shooters for adults who need to ease frayed nerves after they've had enough frights for one night.

As for what draws people to the scares, spokesperson Andrew Gidaro credits the energizing power of absolute terror.

"I think it's about the adrenalin rush — there's a rush on both sides, both for the one scaring and the one being scared," Gidaro said.

"(It's) the thrill and the adventure. You may not get scared in each haunt, but there's something here that's going to get you,"

Screemer stats

- Last year's event drew 25,000 people and organizers are expecting even more this year.
- Screemers features 110 paid actors and runs 12 select nights through Halloween at Exhibition Place.
- Tickets range from $23.50 with a discount coupon to $28.50 without. Visit screemers.ca for more information about tickets, attractions and times.

Explore Hogtown's most haunted

When York was founded in 1793, the streets had very little pavement. The town was referred to as Muddy York until 1834, when it was renamed Toronto.

Readers interested in learning more about their city's history — and hearing a few ghost stories while they're at it — should join Richard Fiennes-Clinton, founder of Muddy York Walking Tours.

"We have two ghost tours," says Fiennes-Clinton. One, the Haunted-Streets of Downtown Toronto, begins next Friday and runs every October evening at seven o'clock.

It's "a two-hour walk from the Royal Ontario Museum, down past Queen's Park, ending off around Dundas and Yonge."

The other, the Ghosts of the University of Toronto, begins later each evening, at 10 pm. Visitors are told the history of several noted buildings, and the ghosts that may be haunting them.

"It's not like an amusement park where people jump out," says Fiennes-Clinton. "It's something you can bring kids to."

Tickets are $10 per person and should be booked in advance.

"The last couple of days before Hallowe'en, we've already got groups of 50 and 75 people," Fiennes-Clinton says.

For more information, call 416-487-9017, or visit muddyyorktours.com.

QUEEN'S PARK POLTERGEISTS

Spirits in the city

"Where Queen's Park is today," says Fiennes-Clinton, "there was a building called the University Asylum for the Insane."

There are three main ghosts here: "the maiden", always seen weeping or sobbing into an apron, the scowling grey lady, and the hanging woman, who appears dangling from a noose tacked into the wall.

The ROM's very first curator, Charles Currelly, sometimes worked so late that when he realized what time it was, he'd change into a nightshirt and sleep in his office. Half a century after his death, he's still seen wandering the halls of his museum, dressed in a nightshirt.

Candy corn — but different

These layered cupcakes look just like the real thing

▶ Just right for Halloween.

Preparation:

1. Heat oven to 160 C (325 F). Lightly coat the cups of muffin tins with baking spray.
2. In a medium bowl, sift together flour, baking powder and salt.
3. In another bowl, use an electric mixer to beat together butter and sugar. Beat for 5 minutes, until very light and fluffy. Beat in the vanilla and orange extracts.
4. In a liquid measuring cup, beat together whole eggs, yolks and cream. With mixer on medium-high, pour eggs into butter-sugar mixture, a bit at a time.
5. Gently fold flour mixture into butter and egg mixture.
6. Divide batter into two bowls, one having slightly more batter than the other. Add several drops of yellow food colouring to the bowl with slightly more batter, then gently mix in until evenly coloured. Repeat using orange colouring for the second bowl of batter.
7. Divide orange batter among cups of prepared muffin tin. Transfer yellow batter to a medium zip-close bag. Snip off one corner, then gently squeeze (pipe) batter over orange batter in each cup, creating 2 layers of colour. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes. Let cool for 5 minutes, then transfer to a rack to finish cooling.
9. Prepare frosting in a large bowl, using an electric mixer to beat together butter, sugar and milk. Add the vanilla and beat to combine.
10. To finish cupcakes, overturn them so the bottoms face up. If the tops are too rounded for them to sit flat once overturned, they can be trimmed with a serrated knife.
11. Transfer frosting to a zip-close bag. Cut off one corner of the bag, then squeeze the frosting into a slightly pointed mound on top of each cupcake. Makes 16.

Ingredients :

Cupcakes
- 500 ml (2 cups) all-purpose flour
- 1 ml (1/4 tsp) baking powder
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) salt
- 250 ml (1 cup) butter, room temperature
- 250 ml (1 cup) granulated sugar
- 5 ml (1 tsp) vanilla extract
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) orange extract
- 4 whole eggs
- 2 egg yolks
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) heavy cream
- Yellow and orange gel food colouring

Frosting
- 250 ml (1 cup) unsalted butter, room temperature
- 500 ml (2 cups) powdered sugar, sifted
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) milk
- 5 ml (1 tsp) vanilla extract

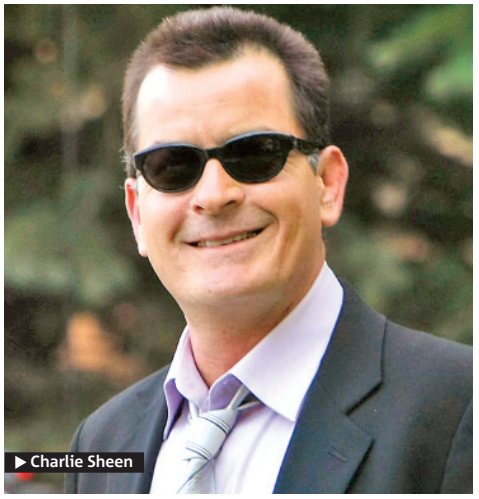
Charlie Sheen trashes New York hotel room



Charlie Sheen

$7,000 damage Chooses hospital over prison Ex-wife Denise Richards was there with Sheen

Charlie Sheen was rushed to the hospital and put under psychiatric evaluation after reportedly causing $7,000 worth of damage to a room at the Plaza hotel in New York, according to Life & Style magazine. And while some reports claim the troubled actor suffered an overdose, witnesses say he was awake when paramedics arrived.

"He was definitely awake before leaving the hotel as he made the choice to go there and not the jail," the source says. "Charlie was incoherent but started screaming slurs at the cops. They recognized him immediately and gave him two options: they could take him to the hospital or take him down to the station. Charlie chose the hospital."

Luckily, ex-wife Denise Richards was around to reportedly escort Sheen to the hospital, as the two had dined earlier that night.

"Denise had to go with the cops and leave the girls with a nanny. She looked distraught," a source says.

Looks like a new love for Halle Berry

Things seem to be moving quickly between Halle Berry and new boyfriend Olivier Martinez, as sources say the pair are looking into moving in together, according to Hollyscoop.

"These two are so in love, they want to spend as much time together as possible. They hate being apart, even for one night, if they can help it," a source says.

"Since they both need to be in Hollywood for work, it made sense for Olivier to move in sooner rather than later. And the love the privacy of her place, although Halle says she can't wait to get to know Paris better."

Talking points

Tattooed on her heart

NO SPLIT. Kat Von D is using the opportunity of her current book tour to clear up some things about her love life, including rumors that she split from Jesse James and took up with ex-boyfriend Nikki Sixx. "I'm not dating Nikki," she tells USA Today. "We didn't get back together. Jesse and I didn't break up."

For the record, the famed tattoo artist is very happy with Sandra Bullock's ex-husband: "I've known Jesse for a long time, since I was 22 years old," she says. "I think he's probably one of the most kind-hearted, intelligent human beings."

You thought he was important?

OBAMA. It seems Barack Obama has a lot of work to do if he wants to be more influential than some famous funny men, at least according to a poll conducted by Ask Men. The Web site tallied over half a million votes, and the president only came in at 21 on the list, with late-night host Conan O'Brien landing at 12 and "the Daily Show" host Jon Stewart taking the top spot. George Clooney came in at 18, beating the president as well.

You live and learn

RIHANNA. The more than a year and a half that's passed has given Rihanna time to reflect on the pre-Grammy incident in which boyfriend Chris Brown assaulted her.

"God has a crazy way of working, and sometimes when stuff happens you feel like, 'What did I do to deserve this?' Why was it backfiring on me?" she ponders to Marie Clare magazine. "But I needed that wake-up call in my life. I needed a turning point, and that's what God was giving to me."

Finding fashion in your costume

As far as pop culture is concerned, Halloween is like one big popularity contest Which characters will win this year? Here are our predictions for the popular celeb costume

KENYA HUNT
STYLE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

Yes there's candy corn, bobbing for apples and blah, blah, blah.

But for many, Halloween is a litmus test for which celebrities, television shows, pop cultural references and movies have gone over big this year so far. While 2010 is destined to have the usual cast of suspects haunting the streets, a few unexpected faces have gotten our creative costume juices flowing this year.

FILE

Eric Northman of True Blood

The tools: During season three, he blew past Bill The New Bad Guy Compton to become the show's most loved vampire. It doesn't hurt that he is also the hottest. (The ladies will love the new Halloween you.) He's got all of the ingredients of a costume party hit. Assembling his look is easy. Just put on a t-shirt, jeans and leather bomber jacket, all in black. The trickiest part will be nailing the make-up. You'll need to pile on lots of light foundation and experiment with eye shadow to get his pallid complexion and dark under-eye circles just right.

Joan Harris of Mad Men

The tools: Everyone's favorite drop-dead gorgeous office manager inspired a season's worth of runway trends. That should make it easy to craft your costume; the high street is filled with knockoffs of all those Harris-like tight cardigan sweaters, body-hugging dresses and knee-grazing skirts that Prada, Marc Jacobs and Louis Vuitton showed for autumn/winter '10. Oh, and don't forget the red lipstick, ginger wig and padded bra. The best part: you could conceivably wear your office-perfect Halloween costume again and again.

GETTY IMAGES

Snooki

The tools: This look is less about the clothes and more about the lack thereof. Start by gathering all of the hair spray you can find. Or save yourself the time and just buy an Elvira wig from your nearest costume shop. Next, the tan. Not just any old D.I.Y. product will do. It's got to be the darkest fake-bake-in-a-bottle you can find at the drugstore. Finally, buy a tank top, cover it in fabric glue, roll it around in glitter, and — most importantly — wear it as a dress.

GETTY IMAGES

Lady Gaga

The tools: The diva is a gold-mine when it comes to Halloween ideas. But serious costume party pros will want to be as au courant as possible, which means there's only one real option: The Meat Dress. To create this glorious wonder, you simply need to stock up on raw steak from your neighborhood butcher. (Don't go for pork or lamb, which doesn't look quite as bloody.) Find a sleeveless dress that has been cut on the bias. Break out the sewing kit and start attaching the beef to the dress. Et voilá! You are a walking PETA magnet! Happy Halloween.

GETTY IMAGES

Sleeper hit: Antoine Dodson

The tools: "He's climbing in your windows. He's snatching your people up. ...So y'all need to hide ya kids, hide ya wife!"

Sound familiar? No, this is not some tale of the bogeyman, but lyrics from Bed Intruder Song '07, the iTunes hit based on the Internet sensation that was Dodson's impassioned, cringe-inducing evening news rant against his sister's attacker (15,764,912 views and counting.) While the Dodson look appears easy, it's also the trickiest. Do's: a black tank top and a red bandana around the head.

Take the fear out of last minute Halloween gear

How to do costumes on a dime The 'value' of secondhand shopping

▶ A Katy Perry costume is an easy, cheap option.

KEITH CARMAN
STYLE@METRONEWS.CA

It's What day? Halloween? Uh oh.

With work, family and social responsibilities, the last thing on your mind this month might have been buying or creating a Halloween costume.

Now it's the 11th hour, the party is about to start or the kids are ready to hit the street for tooth-rotting treats. What to do?

Time for some pre-owned shopping.

"We've seen a rise in do-it-yourself costumes," says Meg Allan Cole, national costume consultant for Value Village.

Understanding many of us are about to be in last-minute panic mode, the international second-hand store chain with locations across Canada has made some helpful preparations.

"We're seeing customers increasingly combine new and gently-used items to create a one-of-a-kind costume that will set them apart," says Cole.

In other words, relax. From essentials to accents, Value Village will most likely have something that doesn't look as thrown together as we might fear.

Still, with the clock ticking, now's not the time to get extravagant.

Cole advises sticking to simple ideas such as pop culture icons, animals or traditions (witches, vampires, pirates et cetera) which never tire and utilize items around the house, necessitating only a few easily-obtainable accessories.

Halloween pick

Paperself eyelashes

Rather than opting for a predictably ghoulish and gory costume, try something a little more delicate and spry this Halloween like these eyelashes from Paperself. Use them to enhance the ensemble you've already got planned.

Klum goes for balance

- Heidi Klum doing New Balance line in a chronological order
- Starting off with daywear

Heidi Klum has a closet full of stylish clothes for her public life on TV, red carpets and the party scene. It was harder to find things to pull off the cool mom look, though, so she decided she'd start designing them herself.

Klum already dabbled in design with jewellery, jeans and maternity, but, of course, she is best known for modelling and TV's Project Runway.

Her New Balance collection, to be sold exclusively on Amazon, is her most complete design project.

"I definitely design with myself in mind — I always have myself in mind with everything that I do. I think it's all organic to me," Klum says.

"I shouldn't have to wrack my brain of what I'm going to do next. It's what I do with all my business. It always comes out of something I love."

And, she says, she loves uncomplicated clothes that make sense that also pull your look together.

Being who she is, with the career she's had thus far, Klum says she can't ever be "schlumpy" — even when she's not on official duty.

"I asked myself, 'How do I start my day?' and then I worked in chronological order. These are the go-to pieces that are stylish and comfortable for running errands. ... The collection will build out to other things, maybe someday there'll be something for a sexy dinner with your husband."

But, like she says, the pieces right now focus on active daywear: loose tunics over seamless leggings, microfibre hoodies over ruched cropped pants, a boyfriend-sweater dress.

Rochette steps into design role

Joannie Rochette is bringing her artistry from the ice to the world of style with a portion of funds from the effort going to support a cause close to the figure skater's heart.

The Olympic bronze medallist has teamed up with Birks to design a sterling silver, heart-shaped pendant which also bears her signature.

A portion of the sales revenue will be donated to iheartmom. The University of Ottawa Heart Institute initiative aims to influence women's attitudes and understanding of heart disease as well as raise funds for research and treatment.

The cause of heart health resonates strongly with Rochette. Her mother, Therese, died of a massive heart attack in Vancouver before her daughter competed in the Winter Games earlier this year.

"Following the 2010 Winter Olympics and after losing my mother to a heart attack, I offered my support to the iheartmom campaign," Rochette said in a statement. "My vision for this jewellery piece designed with Birks was that of a heart with simple, clean lines, that would represent not only the love I have for my mother."

Think big, bold and bright

Experts offer hair, makeup and nail tips to help you fully rock this season's '70s glam style

You're going to need the hair, makeup and nails to really capture the '70s girl dominating spring trends, but you don't have to wear them all at once.

Move just enough outside your comfort zone to update your look, they say. Some tips:

The disco 'do

Redken's creative consultant Guido saw a pervasive theme of "decadent glamour," noting inspirations from the '70s as he moved from New York to Paris for runway shows this cycle.

"For a long time, it was about bed-head, beachy matte hair, but this season was definitely not about that," Guido says.

He suggests teasing the hair a bit at the crown, adding spray shine or an exaggerated side part. A side ponytail or a wave of hair over one eye also capture the mood, he says.

"I follow the fashion trends and then I try to adapt them for women today," says Frederic Fekkai celebrity stylist Renato Campora.

The longer hemline, for example, looks great with some height on the head, he says, which adds to a leaner silhouette.

Bohemian beauty

The darker and smokier the eye, the more you'll come off like Angelica Huston or Jerry Hall, but the more contemporary twist is to add a little texture or colour right in the centre of the eyelid, advises Francelle Daly, national makeup artist for Nars.

At Marc Jacobs, for example, green was the dominant shadow colour and there was a dark, deep red lip. To temper the eye just a little, try mixing the shadow with petroleum jelly, she adds.

"It's all about colour again, but focus on the eye with a pale lip, or a fuchsia lip with a light eye," she says.

MAC Cosmetics' vice-president of artistry, Gordon Espinet, came away from the shows putting an emphasis on beautiful skin. "It's the trend in terms of beauty," he says.

Fabulous fingers

The '70s, bohemian style is more glamorous than her hippie predecessor, says Jan Arnold, co-founder of CND, which did the nails for Marc Jacobs, Catherine Malandrino and Elie Saab, among others.

"This is a rich boho, who wears fringe, floral and flowy," says Arnold. "The manicure that looks best with that is not bare or sheer, it's an opaque porcelain cream. It's super high shine. It just looks expensive."

To carry it off, leave nails a little longer, about five millimetres longer than the fingertip and filed into an elegant almond shape. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Trying new theory

Theory puts fashion favourite Olivier Theyskens in charge of design Brings a spark of creativity to brand

CHRISTOPHE ENA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Theory announces the appointment of Olivier Theyskens to the top design spot

The new theory at Theory, a brand best known for stylish, workhorse professional clothes, is to put fashion-world darling Olivier Theyskens in charge of artistic direction.

The company announced the appointment of the former Rochas and Nina Ricci designer to the top design spot on Monday.

Theyskens had already started a capsule collection as a brand collaborator for the upcoming spring season, but this deal puts him in charge of all Theory collections starting with fall 2011.

"It is really exciting to be able to offer my point of view as a designer to a brand that holds a leading role in contemporary fashion. Working on all collections of Theory as well as Theyskens' Theory will enable me to explore various design directions and express my creativity in a new and broader way," Theyskens said in a statement.

Theyskens won the Council of Fashion Designers of America award for international designer of the year in 2006, and earlier this year worked with publisher Assouline and photographer Julien Claessens on "The Other Side of the Picture," a coffee-table book that showed off fashion shows from the point of view of an artistic insider.

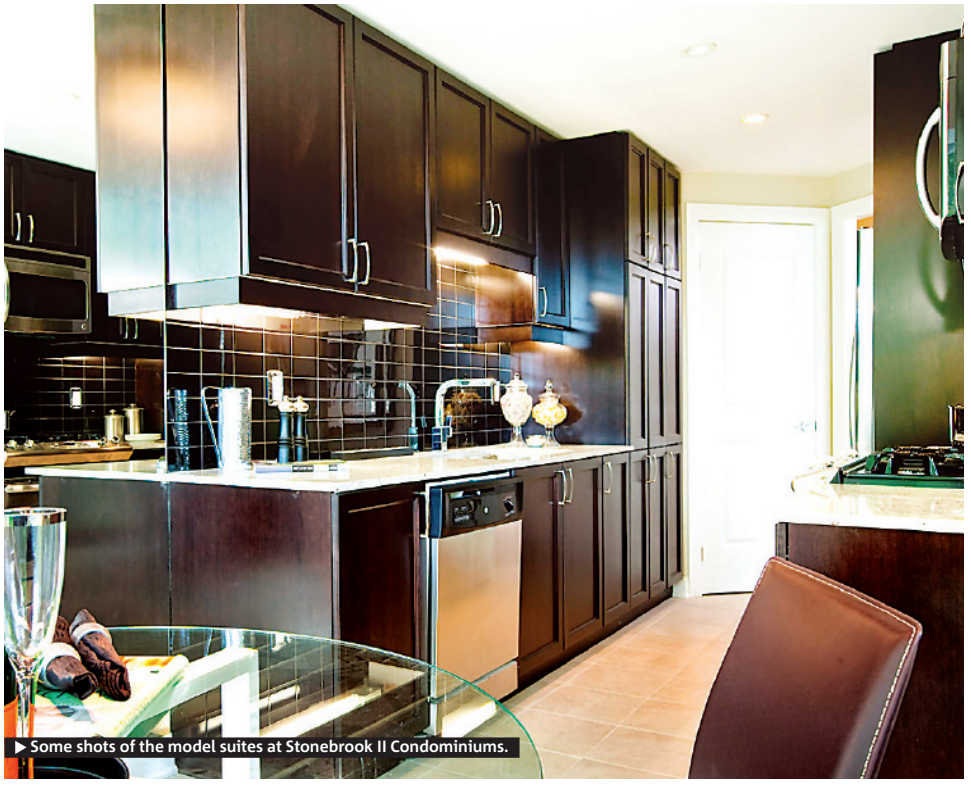
New condo shows off how competing lifestyles can both find joy in contemporary style



Some shots of the model suites at Stonebrook II Condominiums.

A space that's both young & fun

SUITE TALK

RAFAEL BRUSILOW
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

With two distinct designs, Stonebrook Condominiums shows off how competing lifestyles can both find joy in contemporary style.

Designer Sean Swayze outfitted two different model suites at the Mississauga development, one aimed at young buyers looking for an ideal starter pad, the other built for an older demographic looking for elegant modernity.

In the 803 sq. ft., one-bedroom plus den Lakeshore model, Swayze went for a bright, energetic palette that features lots of whites and apple greens mixed in with some yellow and orange candy tones. The open kitchen includes hanging cabinetry in a charcoal finish on linear grain wood. All the walls in the suite are painted white except for a few accent walls in places like the kitchen to give some visual interest.

The overall effect creates a space that feels youthful and fun, not the often-dreary contemporary cliché of dark, ominous tones so common in modern designs.

"The (Lakeshore) suite has more of a younger, contemporary look. I just wanted it to feel light and airy and fresh. We wanted it to be very natural in feeling and show you can have fun with a space. It's more playful because it isn't that serious, severe look," Swayze said.

The Lorne Park model celebrates a conspicuously more grown-up look with a focus on cream, zinc and taupe tones with much more of a deliberately elegant approach throughout the suite in the choice of furniture and accessories.

Swayze envisioned the 1,445 sq. ft., two-bedroom plus den Lorne Park model as more of a refuge for empty-nesters shifting gears to something more adult in look and feel now that the kids have left the roost. A luxurious mix of fabrics in the living area create a satisfying melange of textures while traditional elements like the chandelier — a linear design with organza shades — are specially chosen for their more up-to-date look.

"The Lorne Park shows off more of a transitional look that's eclectic because people would be bringing more of the treasures they've collected from around the world into the space. The whole design is a tailored down version of traditional and there's a layering of fabric to give the space more depth and interest as well," Swayze said.

Finding beauty in berries

Jams and juices not the only uses of fruiting plants ◆ Berries can add colour and character to outdoor spaces

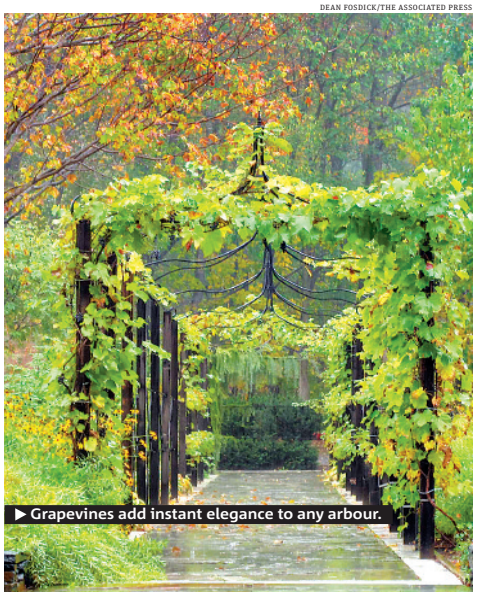
DEAN FOSDICK/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS



▶ Grapevines add instant elegance to any arbour.

Berry plants bloom in spring, fruit in summer and dazzle again in autumn, combining fashionable form with edible function.

Strawberries make an attractive ground cover, especially when flowering. Leaves on blueberry plants turn crimson in fall, and their bare red stems stand out dramatically against the wintertime snow. Grapevines draped over arbours are eye-catching any time of year.

"There's also no great mystery in growing them," said Barbara Bowling, author of The Berry Grower's Companion (Timber Press, 2000). "If you select a good site and pay attention, you can grow wonderful fruit and have an interesting plant to boot."

Maintenance is minimal, but that doesn't mean the plants can be ignored. "Water a day late and you've done avoidable damage," Bowling said from her home in Boise, Idaho. "Weed a week late and it's the same deal. Harvest the fruit late and you have a mess."

Time for a little definition. Fruits commonly called "berries" include strawberries, brambles (raspberries, blackberries and various hybrids), blueberries, cranberries, currants, grapes, gooseberries and elderberries, Bowling said.

Berries deliver a remarkable range of flavours and come in a wide range of colours. They frequently are eaten fresh, but just as often are processed into juices, jams, pastries and dairy products such as smoothies.

"Berries are high in nutrients and fibre and low in fat. Many species have high levels of numerous antioxidants and anti-tumour compounds," Bowling said.

They require little space in which to grow, and many begin fruiting just two to three years after planting.

Fruiting plants come in many shapes, from low growing (strawberries), to tall clustered canes (blueberries, elderberries), or vines (grapes, kiwi).

Which berry plants should you grow? Veteran gardeners suggest starting with something you like, then narrowing it to cultivars hardy enough for your region. Choose sites with good drainage and plenty of sun. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIZE MATTERS WHEN IT COMES TO CONDO SALES

Rooftop Surfing

STEPHEN DUPUIS
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

As the leaves continue falling down, the condo market in the Greater Toronto Area continues to rise-high!

Last week I noted that the RealNet Canada Inc. sales statistics for the GTA housing market showed the month of September ending on a decidedly upnote pointing to a very healthy final quarter of 2010 in the high-rise market.

As RealNet President George Carras noted in an unique webinar announcing the third quarter results, "although at 3,767 units the quarterly sales performance of high-rise new homes was an average result for Q3 over the last 11 years, monthly results for September and the year to date results offers a different perspective.

September sales of 1,658 units were the third highest September performance while year to date sales of 13,994 units were the second strongest year on record for the high-rise market." That's what I mean by rising high.

Delving a little more deeply into the stats, Carras revealed an interesting trend within a trend, showing that as low density new homes near record low inventory levels, there has been a surge in the supply of new condo projects introducing smaller-sized, lower-priced units to the market.

The right-sizing going on in the condo market has created a unique illusion whereby condo buyers are actually seeing average price per square foot increasing slightly, to $493 per square foot, while at the same time the average unit size is decreasing (to 834 square feet currently).

For the record, the current high-rise price index sits at $410,730, up 3.2 per cent from in September, 2009, but down 3.4 per cent from August of this year, based on the right-sizing trend by high-rise builders.

LAST MINUTE BACK DOWN FROM SALE

Legal Matters

JEFFREY COWAN
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

The sale of my condo is supposed to happen today and I have just found out that the purchaser does not want to proceed with the transaction because she feels uneasy about a number of items contained in the status certificate. I am moving out of the condo. and was planning on using the sale proceeds to help me purchase another property in the near future. What can I do?

First and foremost, it is very unusual that the condition for the status certificate does not expire until the day of closing.

Regardless, assuming the buyer is still within the conditional time frame for waiving the status, she has the right to waive the condition or not to do so.

Usually, this would be in her sole discretion, which would mean that she doesn't have to point to specific items in the status that are making her feel uneasy; she can just cancel the deal.

Your lawyer should carefully check the time frame for waiving the status.

If she is within the time frame, then your transaction is dead.

Unfortunately, the condition should never have been extended until the closing date unless the Status Certificate was unavailable until very recently.

If this is the case, the transaction was questionable to begin with and perhaps the whole process was too rushed and in the end, not meant to be.

DECOR MOMENT

KARL LOHNES
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

There are probably not many decorating enthusiasts who haven't heard of the home furnishings powerhouse retailer Crate and Barrel.

It is one of North America's most popular contemporary furniture and home accessories stores and this week a third Canadian store will open at Square One in Mississauga, Ont. If you don't happen to live near a store the company will ship you what you need from their online shopping catalogue at crateandbarrel.com.

I had a chat with Raymond Arenson, Crate and Barrel's executive vice-president of merchandising and design to find out where trends in furniture are heading and asked him his thoughts on what classic furniture items every home needed.

Trends

Where are we going with trends in furniture?

▶ We've seen the furniture market flooded with espresso/very dark wood tones. Wood furniture is lightening up to a dull, grayed-down, weathered looking wood tone and colour, similar to driftwood. North America follows it trends from Europe and on my last visit there wasn't a stick of dark wood to be seen; the wood tones are definitely lightening up.

What about colour trends?

▶ We've seen a lot of brown/taupe colours mixed with strong punchy ones like fashionable orange, green and now blue. That is all changing; grey has become the new taupe and punchy colours are much more subdued; think colours that are slightly murky like purple with a dollop of brown or yellow with a khaki base.

Everitt Table: An affordable and versatile table; its base can hold a variety of table top sizes which makes it flexible to be a dining table, desk or console.

The base is actually two t-bars and requires no hardware so it comes apart and stores in a closet when the table is not needed. With any tempered glass top it is suitable for outdoor use.

▶ Stow Onyx Leather Storage Ottoman

Stow Onyx Leather Storage Ottoman: Can serve as impromptu seating, extra storage, and by flipping its lid over, instant side table.

▶ Marina Lamp

Walnut Mimic Cube: Alone, it's a trendy side table. In a group it becomes a coffee table and in a stack it can serve as an étagère.

Savannah Cane Rug (eight-by-10 foot): Because of its useful size, its neutral colour, and its ability to be used either indoors or outdoors, its as versatile and durable as a rug can get.

Marina Lamp: Its dramatic in shape yet quiet at the same time. It can be used on a table or on the floor. Its fully dimmable function can make it a source of full ambient lighting or soft accent lighting.

Women get cosy in Mom Cave

- Many women are staking out an unused closet, basement or extra bedroom for themselves
- No extra room? Consider turning a stair landing into a mini-sanctuary

Roxanne Jacoby has a guest room in her Pennsylvania home that no guest has ever slept in. It's really her Mom Cave.

Outfitted with mementos and comfort items, it's the only room in the house she really calls her own.

"I've put in an alpaca throw, down pillows, a fan, my favourite scented candle, and a whole bunch of stuff that I want to read," says Jacoby.

It's not like she couldn't set all that up in a corner of the family room, but that "guest room" has an important feature: "I can close the door."

Many women — and not just moms — are taking over some of the fallow ground at home and turning it into a haven to pursue personal pursuits. They stake out an unused closet, basement nook or extra bedroom. Some use the space to work without interruption — they've got it all set up with Wi-Fi, and maybe a TV. Others say none of that's allowed, just books and maybe a music player.

Lori Remien, a teacher in Evanston, Ill., took over an unused nook off her daughter's room when she needed a place to work on her National Boards exams a few years ago. "I went to Ikea and bought a comfy wicker chair, a plush red rug and some pretty black and white curtains. It's still a great retreat where I can watch the shows the rest of my family doesn't watch," she says.

"My room's purple with green polka-dots. It's got all kinds of silly things from my childhood — my light bulb collection, Dr. Seuss books and college letterman blanket."
ROBYN FREEDMAN

New York designer Elaine Griffin embraces the Mom Cave concept and recently partnered with Homegoods in Manhattan to show some decor and space suggestions. She says, "A Mom Cave is where the woman who nurtures everyone goes to nurture herself."

It's different from the quintessential "man cave," where men do manly, messy and sporty things, often involving a recliner, she notes. "Mom Caves are fun, frankly feminine spaces, and they're personalized."

Here's what you need for your Mom Cave: a place to sit, storage space, an area to do what you want to do and room for occasional visitors.

"Organizing your stuff makes your space feel bigger. I love bookcases — you can hide in plain sight," says Griffin. Colourful boxes and file folders work well; group an array of favourite photos in fun frames on the shelves.

Get smart about energy use

Savvy consumers look to reduce cost of having to use smart meters

It will be up to savvy consumers to outsmart the newly minted smart meters which began rolling out in Ontario in 2009.

The smart meters have been introduced by government in an effort to convince people to change their habits to take advantage of time-of-use pricing. Essentially, if consumers use electricity at off-demand times, it is cheaper.

British Columbians haven't received the devices yet, but they are planned. The meters have been installed in many jurisdictions in North America and residents of other Canadian provinces can probably expect them in some shape or form in the future.

Smart meters replace old-style meters by recording home owners' total electrical consumption hour by hour. The data is then sent to the local utility. Different prices apply at different times of day. During the winter cycle which starts Nov. 1, peak prices are charged to customers for usage between 7 and 11 a.m. and 5 and 9 p.m. The mid-peak prices are charged from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and the off-peak period runs from 9 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Consumers get a break on the weekend when off-peak rates apply all day and night on both Saturday and Sunday.

Whether or not your household has a smart meter, tips to reduce energy bills are always helpful.

The kitchen can be heavily used during on-peak hours, especially for families with young children. The dishwasher and electric stove are prime users of energy, says Toronto home economist Mairlyn Smith.

A devout conservationist, she has had her smart meter for about six months and with, careful planning, has managed to keep her hydro bills under control.

"I use my microwave because it uses less power, and I boil my water for tea which takes all of four minutes."

Smith says her kitchen appliance that "sucks the most energy is the dishwasher," so the only time she uses it is when she and her partner entertain.

"Now we handwash our dishes and we actually enjoy it as it gives us a chance to talk and that's nice."

She suggests using a slow cooker on the weekend to prepare meals for the week ahead, which can result in major energy savings.

"I think that families who do big-batch cooking on the weekend will save money in the long run," Smith says. "Make stews, chilis, soups and other meals which can all be microwaved during the week instead of turning on the stove."

The refrigerator uses a fair amount of electricity, so she suggests those in the market for a new one should choose a model that is energy efficient.

Planning is key, she says. "Opening the fridge and standing in front trying to decide what you want to take out takes a ton of energy. And overcrowding is bad as well as the fridge has to use extra energy to keep the food inside cold."

But the newly re-opened Salad Creations on Yonge pulled me in.

The selection is fantastic — build your own salad from four types of lettuce, over 40 ingredients and 20 salad dressings, or choose from 12 featured salads or 10 featured wraps. There are tasty soups and paninis as well.

Featured Salad Wild Alaskan Salmon (Full $9.99, Jr $8.99) offers spinach, wild Alaskan salmon, tomatoes, carrots, red onions, sunflower seeds, feta cheese and balsamic vinaigrette. Actually, I get to choose a dressing, so I get Honey Herb & Dijon.

Here's what makes Salad Creations better than their competitors: Fresh ingredients without that chemically-processed taste, a light touch with the dressing and huge portions that leave you satisfied.

Cookbook offer best recipes of Chatelaine's 82-year reign

The new food editor of Chatelaine calls the magazine's latest cookbook released this month as featuring classics with a twist.

"We chose the best of all recipes from the magazine's archives," says Claire Tansey who with a roster of professional recipe testers has produced Chatelaine Modern Classics: 250 Fresh Recipes from The Chatelaine Kitchen.

Tansey, 35, a professional chef, writer, restaurant critic and product developer, took over the post of food editor early this year, replacing longtime editor Monda Rosenberg who retired in 2009.

"I would say there has been a shift in what people have in their pantries in the last 10 years."
CHATELAINE FOOD EDITOR CLAIRE TANSEY

She says that in any given year Chatelaine Kitchen develops and tests over 500 recipes for the nearly four million readers of the 82-year-old Canadian women's magazine.

"And the team working on the book found the recipes that really stood out were the ones that are relevant to women's busy lives," Tansey notes.

"Something like coconut milk can be a staple now and people are so familiar with Thai and Indian cuisine it's just normal."

The book has 170 stunning colour photographs and recipes such as pistachio-crusted salmon and sticky toffee pudding with caramel, as well as party-planning tips, menus and drink suggestions.

Recipe: Elegant pork tenderloin

Ingredients :

- 1 pork tenderloin (625g)
- 2 slices bacon, chopped
- 75 ml diced onion
- 175 ml dry seasoned breadcrumbs
- 1 apple, peeled, cored and chopped
- 75 ml chopped toasted walnuts
- 75 ml fresh or frozen cranberries, halved if large
- 5 ml chopped fresh sage leaves or 2 ml dried
- Chicken broth or water
- Salt and pepper
- 30 ml olive oil

Preparation:

1. Cut tenderloin almost through lengthwise; open like a book. Place plastic wrap on top and under tenderloin; pound with rolling pin to flatten to even thickness. Set aside.
2. In a medium saucepan or skillet, cook bacon and onion over medium-high heat until tender and browned. Stir in breadcrumbs, apple, walnuts, cranberries and sage. Moisten slightly with up to 50 ml (1/4 cup) broth until mixture holds together when pressed. Season with salt, pepper and more sage to taste.
3. Place tenderloin, smooth side down, on work surface. Press filling along length of centre third; roll meat around filling to enclose completely. Tie with string at 4-cm (1 1/2-inch) intervals. (Can be wrapped in plastic wrap and refrigerated overnight at this point.)
4. Place, seam-side-down, in lightly greased baking dish. Brush with oil. Sprinkle with pepper to taste. Roast in a 180 C (350 F) oven for 45 minutes until meat thermometer inserted in centre registers 71 C (160 F) or until juices run clear when pork is pierced and just a hint of pink remains inside.
5. Let stand for 10 minutes slice into 2-cm slices.

Party on with these ribs

A buffet-style dinner party can take a lot of stress out of your winter entertaining

These sweet and savoury Korean Kalbi Beef Ribs make a great buffet recipe and can be served with a side of rice prepared in a rice cooker.

The multi-purpose ribs can also be cut into smaller pieces and served as a holiday appetizer.

Ingredients :

- 250 ml brown sugar
- 250 ml soy sauce
- 125 ml water
- 50 ml sweet rice wine
- 1 onion, minced
- 1 Asian pear, finely chopped
- 50 ml minced garlic
- 15 ml sesame oil
- 1 ml cracked black pepper
- 2.2 kg Korean-style beef short ribs
- 50 ml thinly sliced green onion (optional)

Korean Kalbi Beef Ribs

These can be marinated and kept frozen for up to one month. They can be thawed in the refrigerator or cooked directly from frozen by adding about two minutes to each side during cooking.

Preparation:

1 In a bowl, whisk together brown sugar, soy sauce, water, rice wine, onion, pear, garlic, sesame oil and pepper. Transfer beef into a large sealable freezer bag (you may need 2). Add marinade evenly, pressing out excess air from bag, and seal. Turn bag over several times to ensure beef is evenly coated. Refrigerate for at least 4 hours but preferably overnight and up to 2 days.

2 Heat a grill or grill pan over medium-high. Drain excess marinade off beef. Grill short ribs, turning once, to desired doneness, 3 to 4 minutes per side. Alternatively, broil on high for about 3 minutes on each side.

3 Garnish with thinly sliced green onions, if desired. Serve whole pieces as a main course or cut into smaller pieces, using kitchen shears, for a starter or party nibbles. Makes 12 main-course servings.

Time to harness the power of salt

Salting as a deliberate act.

Sounds a bit intense. And for Mark Bitterman, it is. It's a call to action, a plan to banish bland food.

"Think about salting as a deliberate act," says Bitterman, author of Salted (Ten Speed Press, 2010), a 312-page devotional to salt. "This isn't about being a fancy chef. It's about how to make every single food you eat in your daily life come alive."

Because truth is, salt has a powerful effect on food. And just a little bit goes a long way. Most importantly, salt added at the stove or table isn't what worries health officials. That would be the salt added to processed food.

So salt on. And here's Bitterman's tips to help you sort through the maze of salts that crowd the market.

Salts vary in moisture, mineral content and the size and structure of their crystals, Bitterman says. Moisture dictates "mouth feel," while mineral content will play up or tone down a food's intrinsic qualities, such as fruitiness. Crystal size creates different sensations on the tongue.

For example, a salt with a broad, flat flake — say a Maldon sea salt — will offer "an electrical pop of salt" or even "a kapow," he says, while the moisture-filled micro-grains of a French fleur de sel will create "a pliant, supple feeling" on the tongue.

Using the language of wine, Bitterman talks about salts that are "unctuous," that impart "spiciness" or "butteriness." He refers to a salt's "meroir," the qualities it derives from its ocean, and calls himself as a "semelier."

And he's on a mission to change the way Americans think about — and use — salt. First, he says, get over the idea that salt is "cheap." "A box will last a year, so if it costs $5 or $15 it doesn't matter," he says.

Next, get in touch with your palate. If you like boldness, go with flaky salt. If you like subtlety, go with fleur de sel. But also know that not only does each salt taste differently, they must be stored differently, too. Flaky salt can be kept on the table in a simple dish; fleur de sel should be stored in an airtight container.

Kessel, Seguin forever linked

Trade of draft pick to Bruins leaves fans wondering what if

There's a Facebook group devoted to fans of Phil Kessel. Tyler Seguin's best friends are on it.

Over the summer, Kessel and Seguin met in Atlantic City to promote some mutual hockey sponsors. They talked about each other's cities.

All last year, with Seguin rated either No. 1 or 2 draft pick, Seguin kept wondering where he would land because he knew it wouldn't be with his hometown Maple Leafs. They had traded their top pick to Boston in a package of picks for Kessel. Like it or not, Seguin will be forever linked to Kessel in one of GM Brian Burke's signature trades. Leaf fans will follow Seguin's career more closely because he could have been a Leaf.

"Growing up, all I wanted was to watch Toronto win a Cup," said Seguin, born and raised in Brampton. "That's what everyone wanted back then. They were my local team. Now I'm going against them.

"I've got some buddies back home who say they're Toronto fans but they're going to be wearing Seguin jerseys. We'll see what happens."

Seguin plays his seventh NHL game tonight and first against his home town team.

"I think my friends might have had it circled more than I," said Seguin. "It should be a lot of fun. It might be a little strange seeing a Leaf jersey on the opposing team."

His family visited last week, and father Paul Seguin couldn't have been prouder.

"He's just 18 and he's playing in the NHL," said Paul Seguin, who played for the Bramalea Blues and then in the NCAA. "That's the part of his accomplishment that's so astounding."

For Seguin's long-term development, Boston could not have been a better landing spot. For one thing, his family has ties to New England. His father played at the University of Vermont along with ex-NHLer John Leclair and has gotten to know plenty of hockey people on the American eastern seaboard.

Caputi gets the call

Luca Caputi became a piece to the Leafs puzzle for tonight's game in Boston based on the type of person and player he is.

Toronto, which broke a three-game losing streak Tuesday, heads to Boston without Colby Armstrong and with Kris Versteeg nursing a sore back.

The Leafs turned to Caputi yesterday to fill in for Armstrong and help maintain the excellent play their third line has produced as of late.

Caputi got the call for a reason. The Toronto native is a nose-to-the-grindstone type player, one who keeps a positive attitude, accepts demotions with determination instead of consternation, and can fill in a checking or grinding role anywhere on the third or fourth lines.

And at $585,000 this season, he is also the wisest option to fill in for Armstrong on a Leafs team that, as management alluded to this week, is managing its cap room in case of a serious trade proposal.

LET'S GIVE IT UP FOR THE RECEIVER THIS YEAR

CFL Extra Points

DAN TOTH

Receivers have claimed the CFL's Most Outstanding Player award just twice in the past decade, but it's time to throw the silverware to a pass catcher once again.

Calgary's Nik Lewis is the leader of the league's best team this season, has eclipsed 1,000 yards for the seventh straight season, and is the Stamps' inspirational force. When not lighting a fire under his own club with sensational catches or breaking tackles for extra yards after the catch, Lewis is devastating opposing defences with highlight reel hits like the classic on Montreal's Mark Estelle a few weeks back.

He's the league's most reliable weapon with yards after the catch and should also get his hands on the Most Outstanding Player award Grey Cup week, joining Geroy Simon (2006) and Milt Stegall (2002).

GIVE BARKER SOME SILVERWARE TOO

While we're handing out the hardware, we might as well pass the Coach of the Year trophy to Toronto Argos boss Jim Barker.

The Argos can do no worse than finish 8-10 this season and could still host a playoff game, a vastly superior mark than most suspected the Double Blue were capable of during training camp.

While much of the credit goes to defence and special teams – and Barker has stubbornly insisted on sticking with aptly named starting QB Cleo Lemon – who would have thought a team that won just three games last season could contend in the East this year? The credit goes to Barker.

NOT SO FAST RIDER NATION

If there's one playoff team ripe for an upset, it's the Saskatchewan Roughriders, losers of three straight. While the Riders have clinched second in the West and will host either Edmonton or B.C. in the semifinal, either looks capable of knocking off the Greenies. The Eskimos are the CFL's hottest team and are suddenly looking like a contender, having won four of their last five. The Esks roster has also evolved this season with backup quarterback Jared Zabransky taking over for injured Ricky Ray while running back Daniel Porter has been dangerous, rushing for 292 yards in two games. The Lions have also been transformed into a legitimate threat with the departure of QB Casey Printers and the emergence of Travis Lulay. Riders beware!

B.T.O. IN THE CFL

The CFL announced this week that Canadian music legends Randy Bachman and Fred Turner will provide the halftime entertainment at the Grey Cup in Edmonton. If the league is trying to attract new, young fans, why dig up bleached bones from the '70s for the halftime show?

Bonds era finally in the past for Giants

The statue out front says Willie. The cove past right field belongs to McCovey.

But the place still feels an awful lot like Barry.

Not in the Giants locker room, where the leather recliner Barry Bonds liked to sit in and watch his own personal big screen TV is gone. Tim Lincecum has the corner spot now, and has plenty of room since the massive ego of baseball's greatest — and most suspect — slugger no longer resides at AT&T Park.

And maybe not over the right field fence, where regulars still paddle their kayaks furiously at even the hint of a long ball splashing near them. The home runs that used to land there with such regularity when Bonds played are now largely a novelty among the current group of small ballers who make up a not-so-fearsome Giants lineup.

But if this isn't the park Bonds built, it is the park he owned. He played in a World Series here, and he made baseball history here in front of cheering fans who found a way to ignore what seemed obvious.

35

The splash count on the right field wall in AT&T Park is a constant reminder of Bonds. He has 35 of the 55 balls the team hit there in 10 years.

"This ballpark will always by synonymous with Barry Bonds," said Barry Zito, who had the locker next to Bonds. "He's the greatest player ever to play the game."

Bonds doesn't play the game anymore, even though he still hasn't officially retired. Unsigned after his march to break Henry Aaron's record in 2007, his only real connection with the team he dominated for 15 years has been a few perfunctory appearances at games.

DAVID J. PHILLIP/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Andres Blanco of the Texas Rangers, left, and San Francisco Giants third baseman Pablo Sandoval chat before Game 1 of the World Series last night.

The slugger who nearly carried San Francisco to its first World Series title in 2002 with home runs in the first three games, will have to find a ticket if he's planning to be at Game 1. While Willie Mays and Willie McCovey were to join other Giants greats to throw out the first ball last night, the Giants have announced no plans to honour Bonds.

It's not hard to figure out why.

They have a date with destiny. He has one in a federal courtroom.

The stigma of the steroid years refuses to fade, especially for the guy who hit 73 home runs in 2001 while playing in a pitcher-friendly park.

Bonds is scheduled to go on trial next March in San Francisco on charges of lying to a grand jury about taking steroids, and prosecutors have put together a list of former players who will testify against him.

No so fast: Favre may play Sunday

Vikings QB not ruling himself out of game against Patriots despite ankle fractures ◗ Favre likely won't be in full practice this week

▶ Minnesota Vikings QB Brett Favre, wearing a cast on his left leg, walks off the podium after he addressed the media about his injury yesterday.

West Coast woes

The Packers aren't the only team dealing with an injured quarterback.

- With quarterback Alex Smith ruled out because of a separated shoulder, San Francisco 49ers head coach Mike Singletary is gambling on Troy Smith being able to turn his struggling team around.
- Singletary picked the former Ohio State standout ahead of David Carr, who came on against Carolina after Alex Smith was injured on Sunday, but threw a costly late interception that led to the winning field goal for the Panthers.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brett Favre is not ruling himself out of Sunday's game at New England despite two fractures in his left ankle.

The 41-year-old Favre wore a large, grey walking boot on his left leg to the podium for his regular news conference yesterday, and he said he doesn't anticipate participating in a full practice at all this week.

The Minnesota quarterback said he's always had a knack for healing quickly, which gives him hope he'll be back when the Vikings (2-4) play the Patriots (5-1).

Favre was hurt in Sunday's loss to Green Bay, and an MRI revealed a stress fracture in the ankle as well as an "avulsion" fracture in the heel bone, where a fragment has been torn away by a tendon or ligament. He doesn't need surgery, and he said after consulting with doctors he's confident he can't make the injury worse by playing.

Since taking over as the starter for the Packers in 1992, Favre has played through all kinds of pain — including a broken thumb — and not once has he sat out. His NFL-record streak is at 291 consecutive games started.

Favre, though, insisted he won't put his pride in the record over the sake of the team.

"I'm very proud of the streak, but it probably should have ended a long time ago," Favre said.

"Whether it ends this week or it ends at the end of the year, it ends, and I will always be proud of it," he added.

Favre is also the subject of an NFL investigation into allegations that he sent lewd photographs and suggestive messages to a female New York Jets employee in 2008, a development that first put his streak in danger with the possibility of a suspension under the league's personal conduct policy.

Favre said the injury hasn't made him consider retiring now and that he's fully committed to finishing the season.

"There's still a lot of football left. We've dug ourselves a hole here. We all know that, for whatever reason," Favre said.

Mike Weir eyeing December comeback

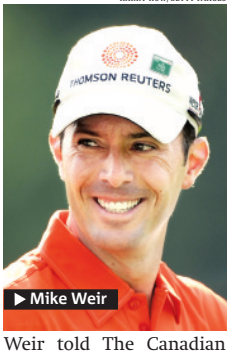
Mike Weir is on the comeback trail and he's decided to do it his own way.

The Canadian lefty plans to rely less on swing coach Mike Wilson when he returns to competitive golf, something that could happen as soon as December.

The past few months have been about more than simply trying to repair ligament damage in his right elbow. Weir has also spent plenty of time watching old footage of his swing and plotting a strategy to regain his form.

"Basically, the last eight or nine weeks I've been able to kind of figure out a lot of this on my own,"

HARRY HOW/GETTY IMAGES



▶ Mike Weir

Weir told The Canadian Press in an interview yesterday. "I really don't think I need a teacher. I need a set of eyes — whether it's Mike or someone else — to keep an eye on what I know and give some feedback. I'm taking ownership of what I'm trying to accomplish when I make a swing.

"I feel like I don't need anybody to tell me what to do. I know what I need to do."

Weir's practice has so far been limited to some work on chipping and a few swings with a five-iron at the indoor facility he has at home in Utah.

He's eyeing a return at the Shark Shootout in mid-December, one of golf's "silly season" events that comes after the regular PGA Tour schedule has ended. THE CANADIAN PRESS

- I will show you the face of your enemy

Real Testimony 100% Guaranteed
I wasn't feeling well and felt no relief with all the medicine I was taking so I looked for an alternative solution and I found it with the Shaman who showed me that my illness was not natural but a spell that my stepmother had placed on me. The shaman helped me remove the evildoing and showed me my enemy's face. Forever grateful to the Shaman.

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 The bigger the challenge the more you like it and with Mars making the best possible angle to your sign this week you feel you could take on the world and win. Maybe you can, but why so drastic?

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 An offer may look attractive but do you know for certain what it's all about and can you be sure that the people you will be dealing with won't cheat you at some stage?

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You need to be more assertive, especially when dealing with people who think they can bully you into doing whatever it is that pleases them. You must stand up for yourself.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 If there are certain areas of your lifestyle that you feel are not as ordered or as efficient as they could be then start making changes. You may think you lack discipline but you don't.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 Life is good and getting better by the minute and if you don't quite believe that now you will believe it by the end of the day as Mars moves in your favour. Put yourself about a bit.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 Like it or not you've got to move with the times, so stop making excuses and do whatever it takes to get yourself up to speed on the latest developments.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 You may want more independence but not everyone is willing to give it to you. Well that's too bad because you are in no mood to compromise. You cannot please everyone, nor should that be your aim.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 Is your brain plugged in? Let's hope so because you need to be on your toes today, especially where money matters are concerned.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Mars in your sign will give you superhuman levels of strength and stamina today. Your rivals and competitors won't stand a chance. That is if any of them have the guts to take you on.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 You want to get along with people but the planets warn there are some individuals you need to be wary of. How do you tell who they are? They're the ones who try to interest you in the latest "big thing".

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 No matter how friendly an Aquarius you happen to be you will come across someone today who is impervious to your charms.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Mars, planet of energy, transits the career angle of your chart from today, so keep your senses on full alert because there will be at least one, and maybe several, opportunities.
